Carter favors equal taxes for married couples

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter says the government ought to give married working couples the same tax benefits available to unmarried working people who live together.

He also says the government should remove from welfare programs the economic encouragement for fathers to desert their families.

The President, in a philosophical Fathers Day interview with The Associated Press, discussed the problems of the American family in 1977 and what the government might do to help.

Away from his imposing antique desk in the Oval Office, he relaxed across the room in a salmon-colored wing chair. He talked of the problems his own success has created for those close to him — the aides who spend so much time at the White House that he's had to order them to see their families.

The President, dressed in blue pinstripes, sat with his legs crossed, as casually as he might in his favorite blue jeans.

The interview was scheduled to last 10 minutes but the President stretched it to a half-hour.

Carter, husband for almost 31 years, father of four, spoke of his own family life as a child; of his joy at being a grandfather; of his support for working mothers, including his wife, Rosalynn. Sending her on a diplomatic mission to Latin America "proved to be one of the better things I've ever done," he said.

Then he talked of his hopes for the American family.

In almost every program that his administration puts forward, he said, "the integrity of the family ought to be a factor." Then, pausing almost wistfully, he added, "I would be inclined to put it as a much greater factor, perhaps, than some others."

Even the tax laws discriminate against the most traditional family value: marriage. Federal income taxes total less for two working single people who live together than for a married working couple.

Congress has voted this year to reduce the difference, but it still exists.

"And I would like to eliminate the disparity altogether," Carter said.

The new standard deductions effective this year can total $1,-200 more for two single working people living together than for a married working couple filing jointly. Under the old law, the unmarried couple could have a $2,000 advantage when each took the standard deduction. Married persons filing separate tax returns cannot get the same benefits available to unmarried persons.

The welfare laws, he said, "quite often benefit handsomely the divided family. If the husband works full-time at the minimum wage, he makes a certain income for his wife and children. But if he leaves home or pretends to leave home and continues to work, and his family draws welfare payments, their standard of living can be greatly enhanced."

This, Carter said, "is a divisive force that the government artifically imposes on the family system."

But what will he do if he finds it expensive to eliminate laws that make it financially beneficial for welfare families to break up?

Carter replied, "We're struggling with that question now. I don't think it would cost a whole lot more to keep families together."

The President declined to spell out proposals he might offer to change tax and welfare laws.

Does he approve of mothers working when they have small children?

"I think it's good," the President replied, adding that his wife went to work before their oldest child was 2 years old.

Should the tax laws be revised to give working mothers a better deal in such areas as child care tax credits and Social Security?

Carter said, "... I don't want to presuppose the kinds of help we might want to give working mothers. But I think the day care center concept and the tax laws among other things, ought to be designed to let a parent be employed and also to prevent children from suffering.

"But what form the tax laws should take, I'd rather not say because we are now working on a comprehensive tax reform program."

Carter said the country's educational system could be used more efficiently. The President said schools haven't been adequately used after school hours. He said the afterschool program for his 9-yearold daughter, Amy, "really appeals to me."

"They have what they call an expanded school program where kids can come to school at 7:30 a.m. and not leave until 6 p.m.," Carter said. "This gives both parents freedom to be employed, or where there is only one parent, that person can do so."

Carter said Amy's fourthgrade afterschool curriculum includes computer programming, as well as Spanish and photography. He said there is no truth to a rumor that he plans to transfer her from District of Columbia public schools to private school.

The reporter turned the discussion to homosexuality, a topic of discussion around the country following repeal of a Florida ordinance banning discrimination against homosexuals.

Q. Let me ask you a question that has become troublesome in the last few weeks in Florida and has become a national issue. I wonder if you think homosexuality is a threat to the family. Should they be able to adopt children and teach school? And marry?

A. I don't see homosexuality as a threat to the family. What has caused the highly publicized confrontations on homosexuality is the desire of homosexuals for the rest of society to approve and to add its acceptance of homosexuality as a normal sexual relationship. I don't feel that it's a normal interrelationship. But at the same time, I don't feel that society, through its laws, ought to abuse or harass the homosexual. I think it's one of those things that is not accepted by most Americans as a normal sexual relationship. In my mind it's certainly not a substitute for the family life that I described to you.

Q. Do you think they should be able to adopt children or teach school? Would you be upset if you knew Amy was being taught by a homosexual?

A. That's something I'd rather not answer. I don't see the need to change laws to permit homosexuals to marry. I know that there are homosexuals who teach and the children don't suffer. But this is a subject I don't particularly want to involve myself in. I've got enough problems without taking on another.

Carter said that he thinks political life in the capital puts special strains on marriages. "I think in Washington there is a particular conflict between ambition and the desire to do a good job, which is legitimate on one hand, and the obligations to hold your own families together and meet the needs of your spouse and children on the other. I don't think the two are necessarily incompatible."

Carter volunteered that when he has heard of a staffer's possible marriage problems, "Rosalynn and I have invited the family to come over and let the children play with Amy and let us show them that you can have an aggressive, dynamic, competitive political career and at the same time, maintain your allegiances and your obligations to your own family duties."

Couples should take marriage vows seriously, Carter said. He added: "I'm not trying to be a prude. I'm not going to interfere with the right of people to make their own decisions under our laws."

The President was asked whether he would counsel a member of his staff to marry the person he or she is living with. Carter said, "I think I'd have to judge that on an individual basis. I have to admit that on a few occasions, I have counseled with members of my staff about that subject. I've never tried to tell them what to do. I've never insinuated that they would be punished if they didn't."

Carter has, on occasion, offered some advice on the subject. While visiting the Department of Housing and Urban Development in February, he told employes:

Sales tax again to go before Puxico voters

PXUCIO — Voters will once again decide the fate of a proposed one-cent city sales tax in a special election to be held June 21. A simple majority is required for passage.

Two years ago voters approved a sales tax for a proposed medical center in an attempt to attract a doctor to locate in town.

After the tax was passed, however, it was determined that the tax money could not be used for the medical center, and voters were given a chance to either abolish the tax, since it could not be used for its intended purpose, or retain it and use it as general revenue.

The citizens defeated the tax.

The town, however,needs more money, so a sales tax is again being sought.

"It was a problem last time around," Mayor Lonnie guilliams said, "but we learned our lesson."

This time the revenue from the tax is for "whatever is needed, we're not going to box ourselves in," Guilliams said.

Guilliam suggested that the money could be used to purchase a new fire truck, since the city's present truck is a 1953 mode; possibly build a shelter for an ambulance provided to the city by the Stoddard County Ambulance District; and in that building possibly include a community room.

"Everybody recognizes these things are needed," Guilliams said. "It's a matter of how to pay for it."

The City Council decided on a sales tax rather than an increase in property taxes because "we felt this to be more equitable."

"Out of-town people use city services, such as streets, and this would be one way for them to help pay for the services, Guilliams suggested.

The extra $28,000 to $30,000 expected to be generated by the tax will help the city, but will also help those living outside the city wo will help pay the tax, Guilliams said.

He mentioned the fire truck: "If we get a new truck, we can use the old truck outside the city limits. So, even though they will be paying taxes, they will get positive benefits."

Presently, the truck is not allowed to go outside the city limits. The truck is housed in a shed just bigh enough for it, but not big enough for another truck, or even a bigger truck.

Concerning the proposed community room, Guilliams said that for many years the city's senior citizens have met in a church basement and have requested some kind of better location.

The city figures that a community room would benefit not only the senior citizens but several other groups which are active in the city, such as service organizations.

Guilliams is confident of the citizens passing the proposal. Presently 187 other cities in the state have such a tax, but only Advance in Stoddard County has such a tax.

And if the proposal does not pass?

"We'll have to go back to the drawing board," he said, "somebody will have to figure out a plan."

Rodeo star gets preview

7 injured on area highways

A Memphis, Tenn., man received critical injuries, five persons received moderate injuries and one person received minor injuries in four area traffic accidents Friday and Saturday, the highway patrol reported.

Oliver R. Dandridge, 37, of Memphis was critically injured at 7:40 a.m. Saturday two miles south of Cape Girardeau in a one- car accident.

The accident occurred when the northbound car he was driving ran off the road when he apparently fell asleep. The car jumped a ditch and struck an embankment.

He was taken to St. Francis Hospital in Cape Girardeau.

Two persons received moderate injuries in a one- vehicle accident at 5:15 a.m. Saturday on route W 1.5 miles north of Poplar Bluff.

The accident occurred when a southbound pickup truck driven by Donald Wayne Rogers, 32, of Devalls Bluff, Ark., ran off the road at an excessive rate of speed, then came back across the road and overturked in a ditch.

Injured was the driver and a passenger, Rex Allen Hancock, 28, of Memphis.

Both were tkaen to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Rogers was cited for careless and imprudent driving- excessive speed.

Two more persons received moderate injuries in a two- vehicle accident at 9 p.m. Friday on Highway 60, two miles east of the Wyatt junction with Highway 77 in Missisippi County.

The accident occurred when a westbound station wagon driven by William Felty, 74, of Henderson, Ky., veered into the east-

The Archers to sing here June 28

The Archers, well-known recording and concert musical group, will make an appearance in Sikeston June 28. They will begin their performance at 7:30 p.m. at the Sikeston National Guard Armory. Tickets for the performance, which is sponsored by the Sikeston Christian Center, 210 E. Center St., will be available for $2 at the door.

The group, which has made concert appearances in such locations as Madison Square Garden, Europe, and South Africa, has acquired a large following of those who enjoy the sounds of soul, pop and rock gospel. The group consists of four vocalists, two guitars, keyboard and drums and has recorded three albums, the most recent, "Things We Deeply Feel," including many songs written by members of the group.

The Archers began with Tim and Steve Archer, who started singing in 1965 by appearing in churches and talent competitions in California. Over the years the Archers have grown to include eight members and a very versatile sound which has been enjoyed by thousands.

"Keep Singing That Love Song," an album the group recorded in 1974, prompted Billboard Mazine to say, "The Archers have too much going for them to miss."

Concert to star The Archers

The Archers, a well known recording group is scheduled to appear at the Sikeston National Guard Armory on June 28. The performance is being sponsored by the Sikeston Christian Center.

The Archers, well-known recording and concert musical group, will make an appearance in Sikeston June 28. They will begin their performance at 7:30 p.m. at the Sikeston National Guard Armory. Tickets for the performance, which is sponsored by the Sikeston Christian Center, 210 E. Center St., will be available for $2 at the door.

The group, which has made concert appearances in such locations as Madison Square Garden, Europe, and South Africa, has acquired a large following of those who enjoy the sounds of soul, pop and rock gospel. The group consists of four vocalists, two guitars, keyboard and drums and has recorded three albums, the most recent, "Things We Deeply Feel," including many songs written by members of the group.

The Archers began with Tim and Steve Archer, who started singing in 1965 by appearing in churches and talent competitions in California. Over the years the Archers have grown to include eight members and a very versatile sound which has been enjoyed by thousands.

"Keep Singing That Love Song," an album the group recorded in 1974, prompted Billboard Mazine to say, "The Archers have too much going for them to miss."

Concert to star The Archers

The Archers, a well known recording group is scheduled to appear at the Sikeston National Guard Armory on June 28. The performance is being sponsored by the Sikeston Christian Center.

Teasdale proposals fare well in maiden session

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Joseph Teasdale scored well on his laundry-list legislative program during his maiden session, seeing lawmakers pass all or part of 40 per cent of his package.

But passage of 24 of the 60 proposals recommended by the new governor primarily resulted not because he pushed them but simply because the time had come for them to pass.

"If you throw enough things in, obviously some have got to come out in the end," one observer noted.

In his 90-minute message to lawmakers last January, the governor outlined a program that ranged from the detail of requiring vehicles to stop at railroad crossings for approaching trains to authorizing revision of the state constitution.

"I opted to give a comprehensive address," the governor said early today after the session ended. "I could have opted to stick with 10 or 15 safe proposals. But I chose to present a comprehensive program, one that some said was a four-year plan. I am pleasantly surprised that 24 bills I had urged passed the legislature."

Teasdale's record on his legislative package exceeds the norm for past governors, who have ususally averaged passage of a third or less of their recommendations.

But the issues Teasdale stressed as the key planks in his program—a consumer utility package and major tax reform—were nearly all dead before lawmakers were midway through the session. He then said he would push for revision of mental health laws as his new top priority in the final weeks, but his legislative lobbying on that measure, as on most others, was minimal and ineffective and that bill was dead well before final adjournment.

The major provisions of Teasdale's package that did wend their way through both houses had undergone the scars of previous legislative debates.

Revision of the criminal code, initiated in 1969, has consumed time in both houses for the past four years as has the school aid formula revision. The massive election law revision bounced between the chambers for two years before passing, and welfare reform, mandated by the federal government, prompted a Senate filibuster at the close of the 1976 session.

"I don't discredit those that have served here before," said Senate President Pro Tem Norman Merrell. "But nothing is passed until its time has come and for many of these bills their time had come."

Many of the measures urged by Teasdale in January had earlier been adopted as priorities by legislative leaders. In the House, where Speaker Kenneth Rothman and other Democratic leaders had made nine of the proposals later urged by the governor their own priroities, special attention was given to them to insure full and early consideration by that chamber.

"It's been a learning process," the governor said. "We can and will do better in the future. Next year brings great hope and with better research and more time spent by us in this office, there will be a utility package and corporate tax reform."

Credit insurers vow not to avoid cut by loophole

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri insurers say they will not use a loophole in a new state law to prevent consumers from receiving a 25 per cent cut in credit insurance premiums.

In other states where similar laws have been passed, state insurance officials say, large numbers of insurers have used the loophole to temporarily sidestep the law and continue charging higher rates.

But representatives of the four largest-volume credit insurance firms in Missouri say they intend to abide by the intent of the law, regulating their premium rates.

"Certainly, that language in the law muddies the waters," noted Don Nachtman of Life Investors Insurance Co. in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. "This thing is very hard to deal with if you're going to be very competitive. But whatever Missouri says we should do, we'll do. That's just the way it is."

Credit insurance is sold to guarantee repayment of a loan if the borrower cannot meet his financial commitment. The bill now sits on the desk of Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale, and he is expected to sign it.

Although the law will take effect in September, the mandated reduction in rates will not be required until the anniversary date of contracts between insurance companies and their agents, who operate from banks, auto dealerships and other places where credit is offered. At that time, the generally-acceptable rate can be no more than 75 cents annually on a $100 credit life insurance policy.

Acceleration Life Insurance Co. of Columbus, Ohio, says it has seen other states where insurers used the loophole liberally by renegotiating those contracts with agents who could retain their high commissions, according to Robert O'Leary, vice president for marketing.

O'Leary said he doesn't want to use the loophole, but worries that not doing it might put him at a competitive disadvantage with other insurers who do.

"Frankly, none of our contracts will be rewritten unless the competition comes in the door and says, 'Why don't you come with us and we'll give you a full year at the unregulated rate,'" O'Leary said.

Missouri insurance officials are concerned about the practice, known in the insurance industry as "churning," and believe some firms will take advantage of it no matter what state officials say.

James Sullivan, director of the state Department of Consumer Affairs, Regulation and Licensing has warned insurance companies operating in the state's credit life business against rewriting contracts with their agents to to use the unregulated rate for a longer time.

"Any attempt at policy renegotiation or increase in premiums would be a blatant circumvention of legislative intent," Sullivan said. "I can assure you that such an exercise of corporate irresponsibillity will not go unchecked."

Sullivan said his attorney are checking into ways to stop such a move should it materialize.

But Nachtman of Life Investors, which writes credit life insurance in 39 states, believes the easiest way to avoid the problem would have been to make the compliance date more specific.

"It's better off and easier for the state, the people and the company to have a compliance date, period," he said.

Missouri's new law, however, is not written so tightly with regard to a compliance date.

Spokesmen for the other two large credit life firms, Old Security Life of Kansas City and World Services Life of Fort Worth, Tex., say they do not plan to rewrite any contracts with their agents to circumvent the law.

"That's certainly not the way we do business," according to Rob Roberts, senior vice president of Old Security. "We're all going to be writing the 75-cent rate eventually."

In many cases, isnurers noted, the agent is the only one to gain from continuing at the old, higher rate. Credit life insurance legislation in Missouri was proposed to reduce the commissions agents were charging.

Sometimes those commissions amounted to 80 per cent of the premium, even though the insurance company was taking the risk.

The bill, backers say, will reduce the cost of the insurance by as much as 25 per cent.

Insurance companies could actually make more money under the regulation in certain cases, if the reduction in commissions exceeds the reduction in the price of the insurance.

BOOK REVIEW

TALKING TO MYSELF. By Studs Terkel. Pantheon. 316 Pages. $10.

Chicago personality Studs Terkel likes to talk to people. He finds much of what they have to say fascinating. He puts his conversations with both the high and the low into books and the results are such absorbing reads as "Hard Times" — what Americans think about their jobs.

Terkel's new book, "Talking To Myself," is subtitled "A Memoir Of My Times." It differs from the others in that the conversations recorded here concern Terkel's life rather than the lives of others. The people who were and are important to the author speak in these pages and what they have to say is most interesting. In time, the voices range from those Terkel heard in his youth in the 1920s up to those that are speaking now. This does not mean, however, that the book is in chronological order. It is not. As one conversation reminds Terkel of another he ranges back and forth in time, seemingly without effort and with no discomfort at all to the reader, who is able to follow these travels in time easily.

The talks range from such known figures as Bertrand Russell, Carlo Levi, Jacques Tati, Ivy Compton Burnett, Nelson Algren and Mahalia Jackson, to such obscure figures as the star comic at a Chicago burlesque house in 1926, the cops who arrested a bank robber at the hotel operated by the writer's family, and the street-tough patter of some minor hoods Terkel remembers from his youth.

Waning hours bring out ornery side in lawmakers

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — It is said in the Midwest that the Missouri General Assembly can be more unpredictable and volatile—both on and off the chamber floor—than any of its neighbors.

And as the days of the 1977 legislative session became nights and the work hours grew long, the ornery side of Show-Me state lawmakers appeared on the floor as it has annually for many years.

Their on-the-record comments often didn't fit into the daily reports of legislative action, but they remain poignant pictures of the human side of a governing body. Some of the off-hand and even back-handed remarks spicing the waning days follow.

—After sitting through legislative sessions in Missouri for 29 years, Sen. Richard Webster, R-Carthage, announced on the Senate floor as the hour approached 11 p.m., thathe was so disappointed with the legislature's passage of a bill regulating beekeepers that he would not run for re-election.

—A bill eliminating requirements that certain factories provide seats for women in their shops incited several male House members to remove the chair of Clayton Democrat Sue Shear from the chamber while she was speaking on the bill.

—In an attempt to stall a vote, two senators discussed venereal disease in bees and the sexual preference of those insects.

—When House conferees dealing with the most controversial problem of the session—funding for a state prison—told their Senate counterparts they had thought "long and hard" on the issue, senators were expecting a proposal.

Instead, they got a raw salmon on a paper plate. It was, in the words of Normandy Democrat Wayne Goode: "An offer you can't refuse."

—With a poker face, Webster, known for his oratorical ability, asked that that the title of a bill which had just passed include the words: "which bilks the taxpayers of Missouri."

—In the complication of legislative proposals, bills are often reduced to short phrases for easy reference. Rep. William O'Toole, D-St. Louis, took the boiling down technique a bit far, however, when he referred to a bill on surgical removal of certain organs from the body as: "the so-called pituitary gland removal bill."

—Rep. Gerald Rocerick, D-Kansas City, caught up in the antics of the last night of the session, donned a wig and mustache and walked onto the floor. Speaker Pro Tem Bob Griffin, D-Cameron, genuinely distressed at the "stranger" aimlessly walking on the floor and stopping to vote on a bill at one desk, called for the doorkeepers to kick him out, only to find out later it was Roderick.

—When a rollcall vote caught Sen. A. Clifford Jones literally sleeping, most of the Senate was of a mind not to embarass the Ladue Republican. But Sen. J. B. Banks, St. Louis Democrat who has been a rival of Jones on many floor debates, couldn't resist.

"Mr. President," Banks said, "Every senator in the chamber has not voted."

Senators had no choice, then, but to gently awaken Jones and record his vote.

Motor fuel use higher in May

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri motorists used almost seven million more gallons of fuel in May than they did for the same month a year ago, according to statistics of the Department of Revenue.

Records show Missourians used 249.2 million gallons of fuel last month, an increase of 2.9 per cent over the 242.2 million gallons used in May 1976. Figures show an increase of almost 3 per cent so far this year compared with the like period in 1976.

Today's news in brief

Flooding recedes in Kansas

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Flash floods receded and residents began returning to their homes Saturday after heavy rains of up to seven inches fell overnight in a 40-mile stretch of central Kansas from Manhattan to Abilene.

Mobile home families, trapped by creeks that rose out of their banks without warning, were evacuated by boat at Ogden and Chapman. Some residents had returned to their homes by afternoon.

But damage was heavy and Gov. Robert F. Bennett, at the request of Mayor Ben Gieber, approved the use of Kansas National Guard members from Junction City and Manhattan to cleanup work at Ogden.

Riley County Police also declared a 7 p.m. curfew and were patroling the farming community to prevent looting.

The entire trailer park at Ogden was under as much as six feet of water before flooded Seven Mile Creek subsided, and the water was waist-deep before some residents were able to get dressed and flee.

At least five mobile homes and three or four cars were swept into the creek and some residents were pulling cars and trailers out of the area after the water receded.

Space shuttle test goes well

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Two astronauts tested flaps and the speed brake on the piggyback Space Shuttle Enterprise Saturday in the first manned airborne test of the space program's latest craft.

"Those speed brake tests looked good, and all the other tests look good so far," Johnson Space Center in Houston radioed to the craft halfway through the 54-minute flight above the desert.

"Okie doke," flight commander Fred W. Haise Jr. called back.

Haise, a civilian, flew in the shuttle with Air Force Lt. Col. Gordon Fullerton. The 150,000-pound shuttle, the size of a jetliner, was carried to 15,000 feet attached atop a modified Boeing 747 jumbo jet, which had its own crew of four.

The shuttle and the jumbo jet touched down at 9:50 a.m. PDT.

The piggyback testing is designed to simulate the shuttle's eventual takeoff. The shuttle will go into space on a rocket in the 1980s, then will detach and fly by itself with crew and supplies to build space stations. It will be able to land again on earth to be reused as many as 100 times.

Wallace to run for Senate

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Gov. George C. Wallace said Saturday he intends to run for the U.S. Senate seat held by veteran Democrat John Sparkman, who has not announced whether he will seek re-election.

The governor, speaking at the annual meeting of the Alabama Associated Press Broadcasters Association, said he was not making formal announcement of his candidacy, but "it's the most formal one that I have made. I intend to announce that I will run."

There have been rumors that Sparkman will retire at the end of his term.

Attorney opposes Ray move

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — James Earl Ray's attorney said Saturday he will oppose the transfer of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s assassin from a Tennessee prison to a federal institution.

Nashville lawyer Jack Kershaw said the transfer would violate Ray's constitutional rights because the prisoner "has a right to remain in Tennessee, where his counsel is located."

The lawyer said he could not frequently fly to an out-of-state federal prison to meet with Ray and U.S. House assassinations committee investigators who have been talking with Ray about the slaying of the civil rights leader.

Kershaw said he wants to meet with Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell to state his opposition to the transfer, proposed by Gov. Ray Blanton last Monday after Ray was recaptured by prison guards.

Ray had climbed over the wall of Brushy Mountain State Prison with six other inmates the previous Friday night. All of the escapees were returned to the prison by Tuesday.

Blanton, in asking Bell to take responsibility for Ray, estimated that since 1968 the state had spent $2 million on Ray for investigation, imprisonment and related matters.

A Justice Department spokesman said Bell will make a decision in the matter within a few days.

Air impasse talks continue

LONDON (AP) — British and American air traffic experts pressed last-minute talks into the weekend while the threat of a cut in air services between the two nations hung on the sidelines.

An American source close to the talks indicated Saturday that there was more optimism than earlier in the week that an impasse over controlling the numbers of seats could be solved before the 31-year-old Bermuda agreement expires Wednesday.

At issue is Britain's demand to get a larger share of commercial traffic between the United States and Britain and the British colony of Hong Kong.

Airlines of both sides have made contingency plans to continue transatlantic services — the British via Canada and the Americans via other European points — should the talks break down completely.

But such detours would inconvenience some 15,000 passengers a day during the peak tourist season, and financially hurt the tourism and airline industries of both countries.

One American official said Friday that the United States had gone as far as it could without compromising its commitment to free enterprise in international civil aviation.

1st U.S. male to be sainted

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI proclaims John Nepomucene Neumann as America's first male sa nt SH DEY BEFORE THOUSANDS OF U.S. pilgrims, including two Pennsylvanians who believe they owe their lives to the intercession of Philadelphia's "little bishop."

Papal spokesmen said more than 20,000 Americans — including U.S. Vatican representative Henry Cabot Lodge, Philadelphia Mayor Frank Rizzo and eight American cardinals — are expected to jam St. Peter's Square to hear the Pope order Bishop Neumann "inscribed in the Catalogue of Saints."

Among those arriving Saturday were Michael Flanigan, 19, of Philadelphia and J. Kent Lenahan, 46, of Villanova, Pa., whose miraculous cures led to the 19th century bishop's canonization.

Vatican spokesmen said Flanigan developed terminal bone cancer at age 6, and doctors decided his case was hopeless. His parents took him to the bishop's shrine in Philadelphia to pray, and today his only reminder of the disease is a slight limp in his right leg.

"I remember going to the shrine, but there wasn't much commotion at the time over my cure," he told reporters.

Lenahan, a music teacher, was 19 years old when his head was nearly crushed against a utility pole while he was riding on a car running board. The comatose youth recovered after his parents touched him with a piece of the bishop's cassock.

"They couldn't explain what happened," Lenahan said in a recent interview. "So I guess it was the man upstairs."

The third "miracle cure" attributed by the Vatican to Bishop Neumann involved an 11-year-old Italian girl who recovered overnight from peritonitis, an inflammation of the abdominal lining, after a nun touched her with a picture of Bishop Neumann. Eva Benassi is now 65 and was also expected for the canonization, Vatican spokesmen said.

Previous Americans canonized are two women — Mother Cabrini, declared a saint in 1946, and Mother Seton, canonized in 1975.

Soaring housing costs creating careful buyers

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

With housing costs soaring out of sight, consumers have to shop more carefully than ever to get the most for each of the thousands of dollars they pay for a home.

Financial experts used to advise spending from two to two and a-half times your gross income for a house. They also suggested allowing the equivalent of a week's income for monthly housing payments.

Today, however, the cost of running the house may be even more important than the cost of buying it. In a recent newsletter, Citibank, the nation's second-largest commercial bank, told of a couple in the Northeast whose monthly maintenance payments doubled from 1972 to 1977. The heating bill went from $38 to $83 a month; insurance went from $28 to $47; electricity from $25 to $45; water from $8 to $15; real estate and school taxes from $120 to $250.

It is essential, therefore, to base your buying on the amount you can afford to spend each month for both mortgage and upkeep.

Figure your total, after-tax monthly income; check spending records for the past year; and itemize everythinv on a monthly basis. Include installment debts, insurance, food, clothing, health care, savings, recreation, hobbies, vacation, contributions, pocket money and extras such as alimony. Do not include rent, utilities or other housing costs. Subtract spending from income, and you'll know how much you can afford to pay each month.

Guides on selecting a house are available from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development and the National Association of Home Builders. HUD's "Wise Home Buying" is available at no charge from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 588E, Pueblo, Colo., 81009. The industry's "Home Buyers Guide" costs $1. Write to the association, Dept. SP, 15th and M Sts., N.W., Washington, D.C, 20005.

The first thing to do is select a neighborhood. Among things to consider, according to HUD and the home builders, are:

—Transportation. Can you walk or bike to work or the station? Is there public transportation? Are schools accessible by foot or bus? Will you have to drive the kids to recreational facilities?

—Zoning regulations. Go to the city, county or township clerk and ask where you can find out about zoning rules. Don't take the seller's word. See what the law says.

—Services. What are schools, hospital and religious facilities like? Is there sufficient fire and police protection? How often is the garbage collected — and is there an extra charge?

—Atmosphere. Are there problems with noise or pollution? Heavy traffic? Check during the week as well as Saturday or Sunday.

—Taxes. Will planned community improvements raise taxes? Are there special assessments covering development costs?

There are a number of items to check when it comes to the house itself, depending partly on whether you pick an old or new building. (The government says that two out of three buyers select used houses, but there are advantages and disadvantages to both.)

Either way, you should have a written list of priorities with "musts," "desirables" and "nice, but not necessary."

Visit in the daytime when you can see clearly, but don't rely on appearance alone. Owners of existing houses are often advised to "dress up" the house with such things as fresh flowers or a fire in the fireplace. Try to visualize the rooms without trimmings.

Model homes also can be misleading. Find out exactly which items are included in the purchase price of the house you will get and which ones are extras.

If you are buying a used house, consider having a specialist check plumbing, heating and electrical systems, structural soundness and insulation. Have an expert look for termites. You can expect to pay anywhere from $50 to $150 for the inspection.

Check exterior paint. Is it blistering or peeling? Are the shingles on the roof curling, cracking or blistering?

Test the plumbing. Flush the toilet, run water into a tub and basin. Try turning on the tap in both the bathroom and kitchen at the same time to check water pressure. Look at pipes for leaks and wet spots.

Ask about the size of the water heater. A family of three will probably want at least a 40-gallon heater and you can figure on an additional 10 gallons per extra person.

Make sure there are enough electrical outlets and sufficient power to operate large appliances. Ask local authorities to make sure wiring complies with building code regulations and is not dilapidated, exposed or dangerous.

Look at the walls. Do they seem sound and smooth? Are floors firm and level? Is there good natural lighting during the day? Are rooms arranged to take advantage of shade and sunlight to cut energy use? Are bedrooms and baths located to provide quiet and privacy?

Lynch victory stuns British

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — The landslide election victory by former Prime Minister Jack Lynch, whose Fianna Fail party openly opposes British rule in Northern Ireland, raised fears Saturday of increased sectarian strife and a deterioration in London+Dublin relations.

Rev. William Beattie, an ally of Northern Ireland's militant Protestant leader Ian Paisley, said Lynch's victory "is a morale booster" for militants in the predominantly Roman Catholic Irish Republican Army who seek a united Ireland.

Late returns Saturday showed Fianna Fail — "Soldiers of Destiny" in Gaelic — swept at least 79 of the 148 seats in the lower house of parliament, or Dail, during Thursday's balloting. Political observers expected Lynch's party to end up with 84 seats.

Prime Minister Liam Cosgrave's Fine Gael (Family of the Irish) party carried at least 43 seats and his Labor party coalition partners picked up 17. Independents accounted for four and the rest were in doubt because of recounts.

In a news conference Saturday, Lynch, a 59-year-old attorney and former sports hero, said "we want a peaceful solution" in Northern Ireland and encouraged Britain to "take more initiatives" in the province.

But the respected Times of London said Lynch's unexpected triumph "came as a disappointment to the British government," because of Cosgrave's past efforts to control IRA activity in the south.

The London Evening News proclaimed, "Lynch's Win Is Boost To IRA."

Post and Telegraph Minister Conor Cruise O'Brien, one of three government ministers who lost their parliamentary seats, said he hoped "the size of Jack's majority will strengthen his hand against the dangers of the provo (militant) elements in Fianna Fail."

Authoritative sources in Fianna Fail predicted trouble for Lynch, who was prime minister in 1967-1973, if he tries to keep fervent nationalists out of key posts in the government.

Today's news in brief

Flooding recedes in Kansas

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Flash floods receded and residents began returning to their homes Saturday after heavy rains of up to seven inches fell overnight in a 40-mile stretch of central Kansas from Manhattan to Abilene.

Mobile home families, trapped by creeks that rose out of their banks without warning, were evacuated by boat at Ogden and Chapman. Some residents had returned to their homes by afternoon.

But damage was heavy and Gov. Robert F. Bennett, at the request of Mayor Ben Gieber, approved the use of Kansas National Guard members from Junction City and Manhattan to cleanup work at Ogden.

Riley County Police also declared a 7 p.m. curfew and were patroling the farming community to prevent looting.

The entire trailer park at Ogden was under as much as six feet of water before flooded Seven Mile Creek subsided, and the water was waist-deep before some residents were able to get dressed and flee.

At least five mobile homes and three or four cars were swept into the creek and some residents were pulling cars and trailers out of the area after the water receded.

'Seavuh' ends odyssey with New York Mets

MONTREAL (AP) — From the subway straphangers to New York City's upper social strata, he was simply "Seavuh." And for 10 years their roars of reverence filled Shea Stadium.

"That's what I'm going to miss. The people. Getting out in front of them. They'd stand up and rock you out of the city."

Tom Seaver's odyssey with the New York Mets is over after 189 victories, 2,406 strikeouts, five one-hitters, four 20-victory seasons and three Cy Young awards as the National League's premier pitcher.

Gotham is in an uproar after having one of its last true heroes shuffled off to an enemy camp.

That kid pitcher with the choirboy looks who won 16 games as a rookie is 32 now—and wearing the dreaded red-and-white colors of the Cincinnati Reds.

"It's even hard for me to believe. I don't think I'll ever get used to red," said Seaver, whose unhappiness with the top level of Mets' management led to his bitter departure.

He found himself locked in a conflict with Mets' board chairman M. Donald Grant. Disenchantment over issues ranged from contract disputes to methods of building a winner bubbled into open hostility.

For a moment it appeared the highly-publicized feud was almost smoothed over. Then Seaver bristled over what he termed "absurd statements" in the press and backed out. Hours later he was traded to the Cincinnati Reds in a four-for-one package.

"The reason I called them back was I could just see the whole thing carrying on. It was senseless. I was not enjoying life. I had kept things inside for a year," said the man who turned around the Mets' once-hapless franchise.

Ironically, Seaver recalls telling a Mets' coach Rube Walker two years ago: "'The best thing this club could do is trade me.' You could see what was happening then. They were going for the staus quo, standing pat."

Money was not a main matter, he said. "What I wanted them to do more than anything else was make the club competitive. Money was secondary, because if we were going to be competitive and help the ballclub, money would fall into place.

"One thing that really galled me was it was as though I still had to prove myself each year. They made the old argument that if we pay you this much, you'd get complacent."

The Reds did not renegotiate his $225,000-a-year contract, but they did drop "the negatives aspects of it. For instance, if I don't win X number of games I won't be docked for it."

Before joining the Reds Friday for a weekend series against the Montreal Expos, Seaver fretted in a taxi as rain threatened to postpone the game.

"I can't wait to watch this team play—and be on their side of the field. I want to go in the clubhouse and see if they really put on their pants one leg at a time,' he said with a low laugh.

"They're a great bunch of guys and I know I'm going to enjoy playing here," said Seaver, whose father was a top amateur golfer on a U.S. Walker Cup team.

Pitching is Seaver's passion. "I love to pitch. It's a creative art to me. I can remember when I started out, I wanted to pitch for five years. After that I hoped for another five. I'd love to have five more years with the Cincinnati Reds. Some athletes see age 35 and say 'that's it.' It's not necessarily that way.

"It's a little harder to get ready for starts now, and I don't throw as hard as I did when I was 28, but I'm not going downhill. You can ask the Reds."

Seaver wins 1st start

MONTREAL (AP) — Right-hander Tom Seaver, making his debut in a Cincinnati uniform, hurled an impressive three-hit shutout and drove in two runs with an eighth inning single as the Reds defeated the Montreal Expos 6-0.

Seaver, acquired from the New York Mets just before last Wednesday's trading deadline, struck out eight and walked none to record his eighth victory in 11 decisions and his second victory at Montreal's Olympic Stadium this month.

His single in the eighth highlighted a four-run inning.

Cards sign six free agents

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Former University of Missouri cornerback Rob Fitzgerald heads a list of six free agents signed by the St. Louis Cardinals.

The 6-foot, 180-pound Fitzgerald made 51 tackles and grabbed two interceptions in his senior year with Missouri.

Veteran George Amundson, Doug Brown of East Tennessee State, Bob Lavergne of Houston, Gil Foushee of Kentucky and Kirk May of Duke will also join the Cards in training camp next month.

Amundson was the number one draft choice of the Houston Oilers in 1973 after a spectacular career at Iowa State. He scored five touchdowns for the Oilers in 1974, but was released in 1975. He then played six games with the Philadelphia Eagles.

Brown, a two-year starter, recovered three fumbles and had one interception in his final season. Lavergne is the 12th leading all-time received in Houston history. Foushee was the placement holder at Kentucky. May was a two-year starter at Duke.

Roster reduction should make little difference

ATCHISON, Kan. (AP) — Gail Goodrich of the New Orleans Jazz says the National Basketball Association decision to cut back team rosters to 11 players will have little effect on the outcome of future games.

Goodrich, who is conducting a summer youth basketball camp at Benedictine College, told an interviewer most pro teams play regularly with eight or nine men, keeping the others around as substitutes. "A few players may lose their jobs, that's about all,' he said.

As for the Jazz, he expressed doubt that Pete Maravich would leave as rumored, and predicted New Orleans would improve.

Goodrich said he also sees the Kansas City Kings coming on strong, with the acquisition of Lucius Allen and Otis Birdsong, and believes the greatest player of all is Julius Irving of Philadelphia.

Saints try to beat tough Caps

The Sikeston Saints will try to do something this afternoon that they haven't even approached doing before -- beat the Cape Girardeau Capahas. A loss by Cape would be their first. The defending Bi-State League champions hold an 11-0 league record, including two league decisions over Sikeston, 12-2 and 11-3. The two teams also met in a non-league encounter and Cape won that one, too.

Lefties Glen Alexander and Ricky Taylor will start the twinbill for Sikeston. Their expected opponents are Trae Hastings and Clay Vangilder. Vangilder has beaten the Saints twice already

Sikeston holds a 4-5 league record after a 9-7 loss to Ste. Genevieve last Wednesday night. The defeat, on two ninth-inning homers, broke a four-game Sikeston winning skein.

The Saints lineup:

1.	Bill Schatzley, 2B	.310
2.	Rick Eisenbach, SS	.342
3.	Ron Baker, CF	.410
4.	Jim Saulter, 1B	.289
5.	David Shell, C	.235
6.	David McClarty, DH	.323
7.	Jeff Jackson, RF	.345
8.	Bruce Lawrence, 3B	.219
9.	Mitch Walker, LF	.361

Game time for the opener at V. F.W. will be 1 p.m. Alexander, a 4-a winner over Ste Genevieve in his last outing two weeks ago, will start for Sikeston.

"We've been hitting lately," said a team spokesman, pointing to a .296 team batting mark. "But the defense is still shaky."

The Saints have made 30 errors in a dozen outings, far ahead of last year's pace. The miscues have accounted for more than 25 unearned runs, or, in excess of two per game.

Overall Sikeston is 6-6. Cape has a 12-2 mark.

There was no doubt about Jack Nicklaus qualifying for the 1976 Open. He was exempt from qualifying for being an Open winner the past five years, for being a three-time PGA champ the past five years and as the 1976 TPD winner.

Second IN COMMAND

By DALE FORBIS
Daily Standard Sportswriter

An old friend in Sikeston is dying.

V. F. W. Stadium, long the finest high school and Babe Ruth League stadium in the area is drowning under a deluge of waste paper, unkempt grass, unsafe wooden steps and bleachers, dangerous rusted wires and general disrepair overall. When you add the horrendous lighting to the picture, the hulking stadium descends from less-than- satisfactory to a borderline eyesore and danger to those trying to play.

The park belongs to the city (according to my understanding) and lack of finances limit the work that the city can, and will, do to the park. Trash lines the fences of the park and make it a source of embarrassment to the teams that host their games in it. If the city doesn't have the resources necessary to make the park a pleasant place to be at, surely they could afforc to place trash cans at strategic places throughout the facility and give people a place to dispose their refuse. There is one sanitary department container outside the park, but it has been either too full or too remote to use for several years.

From time to time the bleachers and steps in the stands at the park are replaced, but there is still danger to unsuspecting fans. Many of the bleachers are rotting and several have broken through since this spring. I would wonder: who is liable to suit should someone be injured? Suppose a person is scratched on the rusted wires ringing the backstop, who is then responsible?

Less than a month ago, the Sikeston Saints played Cape Girardeau in a game under the lights. The pitcher for Cape, Clay Vangilder, possesses a fastball that undoubtedly travels in excess of 80 miles per hour. Under the weak and uncertain lights it was my worry that of Vangilder's fastballs would get away from him and strike a Saint batter before he could see the ball. The lights are a farce and, because of them, the Saints tried to avoid scheduling any home night games. Yet the Sikeston Sr. Babe Ruth plays under the lights Monday through Thursday and there are several pitchers in that league who throw hard enough to caus einjury, also. If the 27 lights that are out make the homeplate area too dark to play under, the outfield situation is even worse. Standing in rightfield, it is totally impossible to pick up a baseball hit to leftfield or even right at you, unless it is very night.

A good journalist should always give constructive ideas as a solution to a problem. Just pointing out bad situations isn't enough if an editorialist values his credibility. Yet this writer has no obvious solution for this bad situation. If the city doesn't have the funds to pay for the needed work on V. F. W., then the city certainly can't be at fault. At the same time it is ridiculous to expect the Bi-State League Saints or the Sr. Babe Ruth League to dig into their pcokets to remedy the subpar conditions at their park. Niether organization has nearly enough capital to do such.

During the summer of 1978 the Sikeston chapter of Babe Ruth baseball hopes to host the World Series for the 16-18 year old grup at Sikeston. Two years ago Sikeston hosted the Midwest Plains Regional and did a bangup job. These men will be looking for donations and help of all kinds to make the 1978 World Series a success. It only takes one look at the old, beat-up stadium to see that they have a lot of work ahead of them.

I'm sure creative suggestions on how to improve the situation at the park would be appreciated and your ideas will be aired should you care to write to: Forum, in care of the Daily Standard, 205 S. New Madrid, Sikeston, MO., 63801. Your signature will be withheld upon request, if you wish.

Green holds 3rd-round Open lead

TULSA, Okla. (AP) -Golfers, especially the elite practioners in a tournament such as the U.S. Open here this weekend, play their rounds twice a day — once with their arms, a second time with their tongues.

Both times it is stroke by stroke, the verbal rehash with embellishments, considerable trivia, often humor.

The post-match interview has become a traditional and intriguing ritual which unmasks these mechanical wizards of the fairways as human beings like the rest of us.

Jack Nicklaus is conceded to be the king of this appended drama as the best golfer in the world and the most frequent visitor to the inner sanctum. He's articulate, quick with repartee, pleasant and understanding.

Johnny Miller drops the best lines. Who can forget his off-the-cuff comment when asked at the 1976 Masters if he had seen Nicklaus' 65-foot putt on the 16th hole which ultimately proved the winning blow?

"No," snapped Miller, who with Tom Weiskolf was making a charge a hole behind, "but I saw the bear tracks."

South Africa's Gary Player is the eternal optimist—"I never struck the ball better in my life" whether he has a 66 or a 76. Arnold Palmer delivers his putting woes in a strong, resonant voice while swigging a beer. Hubert Green of Birmingham, Ala., is a typical "good ol' boy," a machine-gun talker with no Southern drawl.

At the fashionable Southern Hills Country Club here, the air-conditioned interview room has rows of pastel green, orange and beige chairs — 164 in all — facing a dias with a gold-covered table, two microphones and three pitchers of ice water.

A three-inch green carpet covers the floor.

It's not dissimilar from a presidential news conference. Players describe their rounds and then fence with reporters, asking sometimes provocative and sometimes inane questions.

The golfers — especially Nicklaus and Palmer — have learned to absorb the more ridiculous queries with remarkable restraint.

This confounds confounds controversial Dave Hill, who in his autobiography, "Teed Off," congratulated them for knowing how to deal with "fools."

As the late John F. Kennedy used to kid with a sprightly, soprano-voiced lady named Mae Craig, Nicklaus has picked out a couple of foils for his jests — Peggy Sternberger, a feisty Memphis radio reporter, and Art Spander, a brash young golf writer from San Francisco.

Sometimes post-round remarks have more substance, as in the case of Ben Hogan who finally broke par at Oakland Hills, Mich., on the final round to win his third Open in 1951.

Quite un-Hogan like, he blurted:

Why have a Lions Football Game?

WARRENSBURG, MO. — Why have a Lions All-Star Football Game? Jack Kinsey, Lions All-Star Game committee chairman answered, "To give the best 1977 Missouri high school senior athletes from the East a chance to play the best from the West and at the same time raise funds for the Lions Eye Tissue Bank."

Originally, an idea kicked around at a local level Lions Club meeting, the game has been set for 8 p.m., July 30 at Vernon Kennedy Stadium on the campus of Central Missouri State University in Warrensburg, Mo.

A total of 66 players have been chosen for the game, 33 for each side. The players were selected by a committee of Lions to represent each of the 11 Lions Club Districts. The athletes will arrive at CMSU on Jly 20 for nine days of practice and fellowship before the game. Coaches for the teams are to be announced at a later date.

The All-Star game will be an outstanding football contest with all the trimmings. The Lions All-State Marching Band will present a pre-game and half-time show. Two top cheerleading squads from the CMSU Cheerleading Clinic will provide spirit and a pom-pon routine will be presented by a drill team chosen from the CMSU Drill Team Clinic.

The Lions eye Tissue Bank is a facility for research and treatment of eye disorders which affect 12 thousand blind, 100 thousand partially sighted and 1.2 million persons in Missouri with lesser visual problems. The bank, in Columbia serves as a processing center for cornea transplants of which 142 were transplanted last year.

Initially, the Lions donated $250 thousand for the building which was opened in January, 1975. They have given an additional $100 thousand annually for support and maintenance of the facility.

We feel we have a good thing going in the clinic; however, we have plans to expand," Kinsey explained. "We hope to be able to build more laboratories, and more treatment facilities including a dormitory for housing patients so we can take an individual from the diagnosis of his eye disorder through treatment, rehabilitation and finally job placement. We work closely with the Eye research Foundation of Missouri in support of the facility."

Work on the center began in 1973, but the Lions have been involved in eye research and treatment since 1960 when the bank was houses at the University of Missouri Medical Center.

According to Jack Kinsey, approximately 17,000 fans are expected to attend the game with all the proceeds going to the eye Tissue Bank.

Tryouts scheduled

The Minnesota Twins Baseball Club will hold its annual tryout camp at Blanchette Park in St. Charles, Mo. on June 23, 24, and 25. Sessions will begin at 9:30 a.m. each day.

Bill Messmann, Area Scouting Supervisor, will be in charge and will have several assistants on his staff so that everyone will get every opportunity to show his ability.

Players 16 to 21 years of age are invited and are requested to bring shoes, glove and uniform.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Former University of Missouri cornerback Rob Fitzgerald heads a list of six free agents signed by the St. Louis Cardinals.

The 6-foot, 180-pound Fitzgerald made 51 tackles and grabbed two interceptions in his senior year with Missouri.

Veteran George Amundson, Doug Brown of East Tennessee State, Bob Lavergne of Houston, Gil Foushee of Kentucky and Kirk May of Duke will also join the Cards in training camp next month.

Amundson was the number one draft choice of the Houston Oilers in 1973 after a spectacular career at Iowa State. He scored five touchdowns for the Oilers in 1974, but was released in 1975. He then played six games with the Philadelphia Eagles.

Brown, a two-year starter, recovered three fumbles and had one interception in his final season. Lavergne is the 12th leading all-time received in Houston history. Foushee was the placement holder at Kentucky. May was a two-year starter at Duke.

Roster reduction should make little difference

ATCHISON, Kan. (AP) — Gail Goodrich of the New Orleans Jazz says the National Basketball Association decision to cut back team rosters to 11 players will have little effect on the outcome of future games.

Goodrich, who is conducting a summer youth basketball camp at Benedictine College, told an interviewer most pro teams play regularly with eight or nine men, keeping the others around as substitutes. "A few players may lose their jobs, that's about all,' he said.

As for the Jazz, he expressed doubt that Pete Maravich would leave as rumored, and predicted New Orleans would improve.

Goodrich said he also sees the Kansas City Kings coming on strong, with the acquisition of Lucius Allen and Otis Birdsong, and believes the greatest player of all is Julius Irving of Philadelphia.

Saints try to beat tough Caps

The Sikeston Saints will try to do something this afternoon that they haven't even approached doing before -- beat the Cape Girardeau Capahas. A loss by Cape would be their first. The defending Bi-State League champions hold an 11-0 league record, including two league decisions over Sikeston, 12-2 and 11-3. The two teams also met in a non-league encounter and Cape won that one, too.

Lefties Glen Alexander and Ricky Taylor will start the twinbill for Sikeston. Their expected opponents are Trae Hastings and Clay Vangilder. Vangilder has beaten the Saints twice already.

Sikeston holds a 4-5 league record after a 9-7 loss to Ste. Genevieve last Wednesday night. The defeat, on two ninth-inning homers, broke a four-game Sikeston winning skein.

The Saints lineup:

1.	Bill Schatzley, 2B	.310
2.	Rick Eisenbach, SS	.342
3.	Ron Baker, CF	.410
4.	Jim Saulter, 1B	.289
5.	David Shell, C	.235
6.	David McClarty, DH	.323
7.	Jeff Jackson, RF	.345
8.	Bruce Lawrence, 3B	.219
9.	Mitch Walker, LF	.361

Game time for the cpener at V. F.W. will be 1 p.m. Alexander, a 4-a winner over Ste Genevieve in his last outing two weeks ago, will start for Sikeston.

"We've been hitting lately," said a team spokesman, pointing to a .296 team batting mark. "But the defense is still shaky."

The Saints have made 30 errors in a dozen outings, far ahead of last year's pace. The miscues have accounted for more than 25 unearned runs, or, in excess of two per game.

Overall Sikeston is 6-6. Cape has a 12-2 mark.

There was no doubt about Jack Nicklaus qualifying for the 1976 Open. He was exempt from qualifying for being an Open winner the past five years, for being a three-time PGA champ the past five years and as the 1976 TPD winner.

Second IN COMMAND

By DALE FORBIS
Daily Standard Sportswriter

An old friend in Sikeston is dying.

V. F. W. Stadium, long the finest high school and Babe Ruth League stadium in the area is drowning under a deluge of waste paper, unkempt grass, unsafe wooden steps and bleachers, dangerous rusted wires and general disrepair overall. When you add the horrendous lighting to the picture, the hulking stadium descends from less-than- satisfactory to a borderline eyesore and danger to those trying to play.

The park belongs to the city (according to my understanding) and lack of finances limit the work that the city can, and will, do to the park. Trash lines the fences of the park and make it a source of embarrassment to the teams that host their games in it. If the city doesn't have the resources necessary to make the park a pleasant place to be at, surely they could afforc to place trash cans at strategic places throughout the facility and give people a place to dispose their refuse. There is one sanitary department container outside the park, but it has been either too full or too remote to use for several years.

From time to time the bleachers and steps in the stands at the park are replaced, but there is still danger to unsuspecting fans. Many of the bleachers are rotting and several have broken through since this spring. I would wonder: who is liable to suit should someone be injured? Suppose a person is scratched on the rusted wires ringing the backstop, who is then responsible?

Less than a month ago, the Sikeston Saints played Cape Girardeau in a game under the lights. The pitcher for Cape, Clay Vangilder, possesses a fastball that undoubtedly travels in excess of 80 miles per hour. Under the weak and uncertain lights it was my worry that of Vangilder's fastballs would get away from him and strike a Saint batter before he could see the ball. The lights are a farce and, because of them, the Saints tried to avoid scheduling any home night games. Yet the Sikeston Sr. Babe Ruth plays under the lights Monday through Thursday and there are several pitchers in that league who throw hard enough to caus einjury, also. If the 27 lights that are out make the homeplate area too dark to play under, the outfield situation is even worse. Standing in rightfield, it is totally impossible to pick up a baseball hit to leftfield or even right at you, unless it is very night.

A good journalist should always give constructive ideas as a solution to a problem. Just pointing out bad situations isn't enough if an editorialist values his credibility. Yet this writer has no obvious solution for this bad situation. If the city doesn't have the funds to pay for the needed work on V. F. W., then the city certainly can't be at fault. At the same time it is ridiculous to expect the Bi-State League Saints or the Sr. Babe Ruth League to dig into their pcokets to remedy the subpar conditions at their park. Niether organization has nearly enough capital to do such.

During the summer of 1978 the Sikeston chapter of Babe Ruth baseball hopes to host the World Series for the 16-18 year old grup at Sikeston. Two years ago Sikeston hosted the Midwest Plains Regional and did a bangup job. These men will be looking for donations and help of all kinds to make the 1978 World Series a success. It only takes one look at the old, beat-up stadium to see that they have a lot of work ahead of them.

I'm sure creative suggestions on how to improve the situation at the park would be appreciated and your ideas will be aired should you care to write to: Forum, in care of the Daily Standard, 205 S. New Madrid, Sikeston, MO., 63801. Your signature will be withheld upon request, if you wish.

Green holds 3rd-round Open lead

TULSA, Okla. (AP) -Golfers, especially the elite practioners in a tournament such as the U.S. Open here this weekend, play their rounds twice a day — once with their arms, a second time with their tongues.

Both times it is stroke by stroke, the verbal rehash with embellishments, considerable trivia, often humor.

The post-match interview has become a traditional and intriguing ritual which unmasks these mechanical wizards of the fairways as human beings like the rest of us.

Jack Nicklaus is conceded to be the king of this appended drama as the best golfer in the world and the most frequent visitor to the inner sanctum. He's articulate, quick with repartee, pleasant and understanding.

Johnny Miller drops the best lines. Who can forget his off-the-cuff comment when asked at the 1976 Masters if he had seen Nicklaus' 65-foot putt on the 16th hole which ultimately proved the winning blow?

"No," snapped Miller, who with Tom Weiskolf was making a charge a hole behind, "but I saw the bear tracks."

South Africa's Gary Player is the eternal optimist—"I never struck the ball better in my life" whether he has a 66 or a 76. Arnold Palmer delivers his putting woes in a strong, resonant voice while swigging a beer. Hubert Green of Birmingham, Ala., is a typical "good ol' boy," a machine-gun talker with no Southern drawl.

At the fashionable Southern Hills Country Club here, the air-conditioned interview room has rows of pastel green, orange and beige chairs — 164 in all — facing a dias with a gold-covered table, two microphones and three pitchers of ice water.

A three-inch green carpet covers the floor.

It's not dissimilar from a presidential news conference. Players describe their rounds and then fence with reporters, asking sometimes provocative and sometimes inane questions.

The golfers — especially Nicklaus and Palmer — have learned to absorb the more ridiculous queries with remarkable restraint.

This confounds confounds controversial Dave Hill, who in his autobiography, "Teed Off," congratulated them for knowing how to deal with "fools."

As the late John F. Kennedy used to kid with a sprightly, soprano-voiced lady named Mae Craig, Nicklaus has picked out a couple of foils for his jests — Peggy Sternberger, a feisty Memphis radio reporter, and Art Spander, a brash young golf writer from San Francisco.

Sometimes post-round remarks have more substance, as in the case of Ben Hogan who finally broke par at Oakland Hills, Mich., on the final round to win his third Open in 1951.

Quite un-Hogan like, he blurted:

Why have a Lions Football Game?

WARRENSBURG, MO. — Why have a Lions All-Star Football Game? Jack Kinsey, Lions All-Star Game committee chairman answered, "To give the best 1977 Missouri high school senior athletes from the East a chance to play the best from the West and at the same time raise funds for the Lions Eye Tissue Bank."

Originally, an idea kicked around at a local level Lions Club meeting, the game has been set for 8 p.m., July 30 at Vernon Kennedy Stadium on the campus of Central Missouri State University in Warrensburg, Mo.

A total of 66 players have been chosen for the game, 33 for each side. The players were selected by a committee of Lions to represent each of the 11 Lions Club Districts. The athletes will arrive at CMSU on Jly 20 for nine days of practice and fellowship before the game. Coaches for the teams are to be announced at a later date.

The All-Star game will be an outstanding football contest with all the trimmings. The Lions All-State Marching Band will present a pre-game and half-time show. Two top cheerleading squads from the CMSU Cheerleading Clinic will provide spirit and a pom-pon routine will be presented by a drill team chosen from the CMSU Drill Team Clinic.

The Lions eye Tissue Bank is a facility for research and treatment of eye disorders which affect 12 thousand blind, 100 thousand partially sighted and 1.2 million persons in Missouri with lesser visual problems. The bank, in Columbia serves as a processing center for cornea transplants of which 142 were transplanted last year.

Initially, the Lions donated $250 thousand for the building which was opened in January, 1975. They have given an additional $100 thousand annually for support and maintenance of the facility.

We feel we have a good thing going in the clinic; however, we have plans to expand," Kinsey explained. "We hope to be able to build more laboratories, and more treatment facilities including a dormitory for housing patients so we can take an individual from the diagnosis of his eye disorder through treatment, rehabilitation and finally job placement. We work closely with the Eye research Foundation of Missouri in support of the facility."

Work on the center began in 1973, but the Lions have been involved in eye research and treatment since 1960 when the bank was houses at the University of Missouri Medical Center.

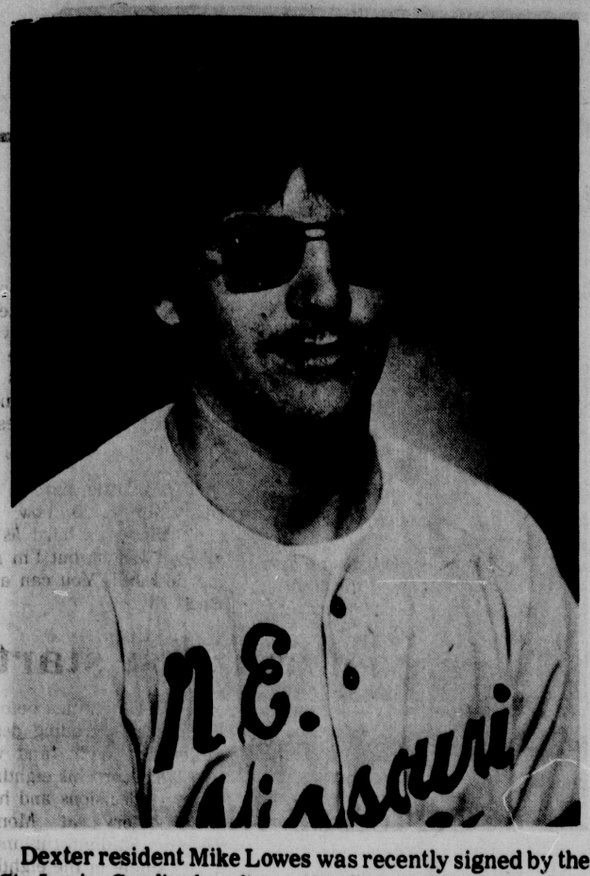
According to Jack Kinsey, approximately 17,000 fans are expected to attend the game with all the proceeds going to the eye Tissue Bank.

Tryouts scheduled

The Minnesota Twins Baseball Club will hold its annual tryout camp at Blanchette Park in St. Charles, Mo. on June 23, 24, and 25. Sessions will begin at 9:30 a.m. each day.

Bill Messmann, Area Scouting Supervisor, will be in charge and will have several assistants on his staff so that everyone will get every opportunity to show his ability.

Players 16 to 21 years of age are invited and are requested to bring shoes, glove and uniform.



Dexter resident Mike Lowes was recently signed by the St. Louis Cardinals after attending a Busch Stadium tryout camp. Lowes compiled a 2-3 record with a 2.54 earned run average for Northeast Missouri State this

How to avoid fire on water

"Fire!" It's an ugly word. On the water it is doubly ugly. Many of the fires aboard recreational boats are caused by carelessness in fueling. As with an automobile, certain things must be done before you can "fill 'er up". But there are differences. In the first place, the bottom of your car is open, allowing ventilation of excess vapors and providing a runoff for spilled fuel. But with a boat, excess vapors can collect in closed compartments, and any spilled fuel will collect in the bilges. When you consider that one cup of gasoline is equivalent in terms of explosive power to 15 sticks of dynamite, you can see why it is important ot take special precautions when fueling your boat.

When you arrive at the fuel dock,shut off your engine and make sure all of your electrical circuits are off. This eliminates the chance of an electrical spark igniting any vapors. To eliminate the danger of vapors getting trapped in closed compartments, close all hatches, doors, windows, and ports.

Static electricity is another possible source of sparks. You can eliminate it by grounding your boat electrically.

Have anyone else in the boat leave while the fueling is in progress. This will give you better control of the situation and removes your passengers from the danger of any possible explosion.

When you are ready to fuel your boat, be careful not to spill any fuel, and be sure to leave room for any fuel expansion in the tanks. Also it is unnecessary to "top off" the tanks. It is a waste of fuel, and increases the chance of spilling fuel into the bilges. After fueling, clean up any spilled gas. This will eliminate any possibility of fumes from this source.

When you are sure that you have cleaned up all spilled fuel, open all closed spaces and thoroughly ventilate your boat for at least five minutes. The last step is easy. Follow your nose. If you can smell any gasoline fumes, you're not ready to start your engine.

The most important part of refueling your boat is using a little common sense, and a little care.

Don't hurry. The possibility of sparks exists from many different sources. All you have to do is scrape the nozzle of the gas hose against the edge of the tank, and....

You can't be too careful.

Torre retires

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Torre, manager of the New York Mets, officially retired as a player Saturday.

He made his last major league appearance in Friday night's 7-1 loss to the Houston Astros when he flied out as a pinch hitter. Torre's lifetime statisitics with the St. Louis Cardinals, the Atlanta Braves and the Mets included a .297 batting average, 252 home runs and 1,185 runs batted in.

When Dave Kingman blasted two home runs in Atlanta May 12 it marked the fourth 1976 game in which the New York Mets slugger hit two home runs in one game.

When Don Larsen of the Yankees pitched his perfect World Series game Oct. 8, 1956, Mickey Mantle made the game's first hit, a fourth inning homer off Sal Maglie. The Yankees won 2-0.

Ron Turcotte led the jockeys at Aqueduct's winter-spring meeting with 104 winners. Runnerup Jorge Velasquez had 85.

Junior high school students from all areas of the south participated in the University of Mississippi annual sports camp . Steven Clinton (right) of Sikeston, Mo. took a breather to talk to a fellow camper, Anthony Terrecina from Greenville, Miss. Head football coach Ken Cooper and his staff conduct camps in football, baseball, golf and tennis for boys age s 10 through high school seniors.

Fisherman catches grass carp, maybe

LINN — Whatever else 01032 was, he was a swimming fool.

Steve Bexton Sr. of Westphalia recently caught a fish in the Maries River that either was a grass carp ... or wasn't.

But it had been tagged with the number 01032 at the Cooper Nuclear Power Plant at Brownsville, Nebraska, on the Missouri River across from Rock Port, Missouri, in May 1976, and had made its way downstream from there to the mouth of the Osage River, up the Osage River about 10 miles, then another 10 miles up the Maries before beston shortstopped it with a trotline baited with Wheaties, a total trip of 420 miles.

The fish had been tagged by a private organization doing a study of the effects of the warm water discharge from the power plant. It weighed seven pounds.

Officials at the firm say the fish was identified as a carp, but Beston thinks it was a grass carp and is a knowledgeable fisherman. His description sounds like that of a grass carp.

Grass carp are banned in Missouri, but have swum into the state from stockings both in Arkansas and Iowa. Many states have banned the Asian import which can compete with native fish and which poses many potential hazards – to desirable aquatic vegetation, and adding to water fertility.

Grass carp largely eat vegetation, but Missouri Department of Conservation studies indicate they pursue and take smaller fish and they have been caught on trotlines baited with fish.

Red Sox blast New York

By The Associated Press

Tom Seaver made his Cincinnati debut an impressive one Saturday, hurling a three-hitter as the Reds blanked the Montreal Expos 6-0.

Obtained last Wednesday from the New York Mets, Seaver registered his 43rd career shutout, for a record second only to Don Sutton of the Los Angeles Dodgers among active players.

The right-hander also drove in two runs in Cincinnati's four-run eighth inning when the Reds tallied four times. It was Seaver's second hit of the game.

George Foster backed Seaver's pitching with his 18th home run of the season, a solo shot in the fourth inning.

Gary Thomasson's two-run homer with one out in the 12th inning gave the San Francisco Giants a 7-5 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates. It was Pittsburgh's fifth straight defeat.

Cesar Cedeno hit a tie-breaking sacrifice fly in the seventh inning to lift the Houston Astros over the New York Mets 4-3. The Astros had tied the game with a three-run sixth inning, highlighted by Jose Cruz' two-run double.

Carl Yastrzemski and Bernie Carbo each slugged two home runs and George Scott added his 17th of the season to power the Boston Red Sox over the New York Yankees 10-4. The nationally televised game also saw Yankee Manager Billy Martin and slugger Reggie Jackson almost come to blows during heated confrontation in the New York dugout.

The Chicago White Sox blanked the Oakland A's 2-0 as Ken Kravec hurled a four-hitter and struck out 11 before being relieved in the eighth inning. Chicago's runs were scored on Kevin Bell's sacrifice fly and Jorge Orta's RBI single.

Jim Norris capped a two-run eighth-inning rally with a run-scoring single as the Cleveland Indians edged the Detroit Tigers 5-4. Jason Thompson homered for Detroit.

Boat races set for 4th of July

Championship speedboat races will be taking place on Lake Barkley in Western Kentucky over July 4th weekend it was announced today.

The races, which are sanctioned by the American Power Boat Association, will feature competition in 28 classes for a total purse of $4,000.00.

The two-day race will be held in Blue Spring's Bay on Lake Barkley, July 2 and 3.

Over 200 limited- class outboard speedboats will be on hand for the races, which are sponsored by Kentucky's Western Waterland, a tourist promotion organization for the Kentucky- Barkley Lakes area.

The last year that speed boat races were held on Lake Barkley, in 1975, over 3,000 spectators came to view the exciting events.

Spectators are invited to attend the races again this year. There is no admission charge for the event.

Singing on the Lakes, an annual tradition of country, bluegrass,and gospel music which takes place each year in the Kentucky- Barkley Lakes region of Western Kentucky, has been moved to the Stewart Football Stadium in Murray, Kentucky.

Atlhough no longer located on the Shores of Kentucky Lake, where the year tradition began, the program for the June 30 - July 2 event will feature many of the groups which have been on the program for many years.

Included on this year's program are the Blackwood Brothers, The Stamps Quartet, The Speer Family, The Henson Family, The Kingsmen, The Statesmen, and The Anderson Sisters.

The concert will begin each night at 8:00 p.m. Regular admission is $5.00 and reserves seats are $6.00.

The strangely spotted Appaloosa horse was developed by the Nez Perce Indians from descendents of the Spanish horse.

Deer poaching is expensive proposition

COLUMBIA — The old adage is that what you don't know won't hurt you, but as far as Wayne Porath is concerned, it simply isn't true.

One thing he doesn't know is the amount of deer poached every year in Missouri,but he is quite sure it's hurting him and every other honest deer enthusiast in Missouri.

Porath is a deer biologist for the Department of Conservation.

"About a year ago," he says, "we ran some computer calculations on our deer herd. The indication was that there are a lot ofdeer unaccounted for which die for reasons other than legal hunting."

That included disease and accident, as well as illegal kill, but poaching is the largest single unknown variable in Missouri's deer management program.

Since Porath and fellow deer biologist Ollie Torgerson already had estimated Missouri may lose 10 thousand deer to poachers, finding out the illegal kill could be much more than that was depressing news.

And, since poachers don't follow bucks - only or other management rules, many of the deer paoched are does which normally produce twinfawns and may have a lifetime production of 20 or more deer, meaning that each young doe killed represents a potential of many more deer that are lost.

Considering that Missouri now has nearly a quarter of a million deer hunters and the last two years has had a harvest of more than 40 thousand animals, the illegal kill is far out of the category of petty crime.

In 1973, Sidney Wilcox, a professor at Arizona State Univerisyt, did a survey showing the value of deer as meat alone, not counting the esthetic or other value of a deer hunt. The avenue amount of boneless meat on a Missouri deer was 45 pounds and, at that time, chuck beef was selling for $1.34.

If poachers steel 10 thousand deer a year (and remember Porath feels that may be far too conservative), it represents 450 thousand pounds of venison or $603 thousand at 1973 prices for chuck beef, an equivalent meat.

Finding out Missouri's illegal kill is almost impossible. Outlaws don't advertise their success. Spotlighting deer is a problem that has grownwith the deer herd.

North Missouri, long an exception to poaching prevalence, now has its own widespread problem, including the worst of all poaching situations, the commercial deer thieves.

Maximum fines !500 on each count) are a detterent, but aren't that common. Missouri does not have a confiscation law like that in other states. In Wisconsin, a violator who is convicted may find his gun, car and any other equipment in his possessionat the time of the violation sold at public auction.

As farmers found a few years ago when meat prices were extremely high, the person who poaches deer won't hesitate to rustle livestock too.

Torgerson, writing in the Conservation Department's magazine recently, had perhaps the most pertinent suggestions for helping with th poaching problem: "Turn in violators rather than turning your head! It is amazing what our conservation agents can do with accurate, timely information, such as a license number and vehicle description."

Missouri deer biologists are finding that loss of deer to poachers is more widespread than they'd believed. Computer information indicates many more than the estimated 10 thousand annually may fall to illegal hunters -- and at 10 thousand animals, the economic loss is more than $600 thousand. Open is played twice

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Lanky Hubert Green, constantly talking, gesturing, smiling to a heat-wilted gallery, scrambled to a two-over-par 72 that, surprisingly, enabled him to retain a one-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the United States Open Golf Championship.

Green, now only 18 holes away from the major title that so far has eluded him, composed a 54-hole total of 208, two under par on the Southern Hills Country Club course, 6,873 yards of gently rolling hillsides that were scorched by 90-plus degree temperatures and oppressive humidity.

Big Andy Bean, the tour's most noted alligator-wrestler, was the only other man under par after three rounds of this 77th American national championship.

Bean, who, like Green, spent his boyhood summers in weather similiar to that which turned this event into an endurance contest, shot a 68 and was one under par at 209.

Green, who needs only a major title to confirm his status as one of the game's leading lights, grew up in Birmingham, Ala., and the 6-foot-4, 210-pound Bean learned to wrestle alligators in the swampland of southern Georgia.

They were followed by a group at 210—even par—that included Tom Weiskopf, grimly determined South African Gary Player, unawed outsiders Gary Jacobsen and Don Padgett, along with Terry Diehl and Tom Purtzer, one of those previously obscure young men who dominated the tour in the early seasgn.

Player, who needs this one to complete a career double sweep of the game's four major championships—the U.S. and British Opens, the Masters and PGA—finished birdie, birdie for a 71.

Purtzer shot the same score. Diehl, in the last twosome with Green, had a 73. Weiskopf closed up with a 68.

Jacobson, 24, a mini-tour player from Minnetonka, Minn., and Padgett, 28, who couldn't make it on the pro tour and now is a club pro in Carmel, Ind., were the surprises.

"I expected to have a good tournament and put no limits on how well I'd play," said Jacobsen, who shot a 67. "My position is no surprise whatsoever."

Asked his biggest title so far, he replied: "The Minnesota state junior."

Padgett, son of the national president of the PGA, lost his card after two years of tour activity but unsheathed a magic putter that produced eight one-putts on the glass-slick greens and propelled him to a four-under-par 66, the best round of the tournament.

The most important part of refueling your boat is using a little common sense, and a little care.

Don't hurry. The possibility of sparks exists from many different sources. All you have to do is scrape the nozzle of the gas hose against the edge of the tank, and....

You can't be too careful.

Torre retires

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Torre, manager of the New York Mets, officially retired as a player Saturday.

He made his last major league appearance in Friday night's 7-1 loss to the Houston Astros when he flied out as a pinch hitter. Torre's lifetime statisitics with the St. Louis Cardinals, the Atlanta Braves and the Mets included a .297 batting average, 252 home runs and 1,185 runs batted in.

When Dave Kingman blasted two home runs in Atlanta May 12 it marked the fourth 1976 game in which the New York Mets slugger hit two home runs in one game.

When Don Larsen of the Yankees pitched his perfect World Series game Oct. 8, 1956, Mickey Mantle made the game's first hit, a fourth inning homer off Sal Maglie. The Yankees won 2-0.

Ron Turcotte led the jockeys at Aqueduct's winter-spring meeting with 104 winners. Runnerup Jorge Velasquez had 85.

Junior high school students from all areas of the south participated in the University of Mississippi annual sports camp . Steven Clinton (right) of Sikeston, Mo. took a breather to talk to a fellow camper, Anthony Terrecina from Greenville, Miss. Head football coach Ken Cooper and his staff conduct camps in football, baseball, golf and tennis for boys age s 10 through high school seniors.

Boat races set for 4th of July

Championship speedboat races will be taking place on Lake Barkley in Western Kentucky over July 4th weekend it was announced today.

The races, which are sanctioned by the American Power Boat Association, will feature competition in 28 classes for a total purse of $4,000.00.

The two-day race will be held in Blue Spring's Bay on Lake Barkley, July 2 and 3.

Over 200 limited- class outboard speedboats will be on hand for the races, which are sponsored by Kentucky's Western Waterland, a tourist promotion organization for the Kentucky- Barkley Lakes area.

The last year that speed boat races were held on Lake Barkley, in 1975, over 3,000 spectators came to view the exciting events.

Spectators are invited to attend the races again this year. There is no admission charge for the event.

Singing on the Lakes, an annual tradition of country, bluegrass,and gospel music which takes place each year in the Kentucky- Barkley Lakes region of Western Kentucky, has been moved to the Stewart Football Stadium in Murray, Kentucky.

Atlhough no longer located on the Shores of Kentucky Lake, where the year tradition began, the program for the June 30 - July 2 event will feature many of the groups which have been on the program for many years.

Included on this year's program are the Blackwood Brothers, The Stamps Quartet, The Speer Family, The Henson Family, The Kingsmen, The Statesmen, and The Anderson Sisters.

The concert will begin each night at 8:00 p.m. Regular admission is $5.00 and reserves seats are $6.00.

The strangely spotted Appaloosa horse was developed by the Nez Perce Indians from descendents of the Spanish horse.

Fisherman catches grass carp, maybe

LINN — Whatever else 01032 was, he was a swimming fool.

Steve Bexton Sr. of Westphalia recently caught a fish in the Maries River that either was a grass carp ... or wasn't.

But it had been tagged with the number 01032 at the Cooper Nuclear Power Plant at Brownsville, Nebraska, on the Missouri River across from Rock Port, Missouri, in May 1976, and had made its way downstream from there to the mouth of the Osage River, up the Osage River about 10 miles, then another 10 miles up the Maries before beston shortstopped it with a trotline baited with Wheaties, a total trip of 420 miles.

The fish had been tagged by a private organization doing a study of the effects of the warm water discharge from the power plant. It weighed seven pounds.

Officials at the firm say the fish was identified as a carp, but Beston thinks it was a grass carp and is a knowledgeable fisherman. His description sounds like that of a grass carp.

Grass carp are banned in Missouri, but have swum into the state from stockings both in Arkansas and Iowa. Many states have banned the Asian import which can compete with native fish and which poses many potential hazards -- to desirable aquatic vegetation, and adding to water fertility.

Grass carp largely eat vegetation, but Missouri Department of Conservation studies indicate they pursue and take smaller fish and they have been caught on trotlines baited with fish.

Red Sox blast New York

By The Associated Press

Tom Seaver made his Cincinnati debut an impressive one Saturday, hurling a three-hitter as the Reds blanked the Montreal Expos 6-0.

Obtained last Wednesday from the New York Mets, Seaver registered his 43rd career shutout, for a record second only to Don Sutton of the Los Angeles Dodgers among active players.

The right-hander also drove in two runs in Cincinnati's four-run eighth inning when the Reds tallied four times. It was Seaver's second hit of the game.

George Foster backed Seaver's pitching with his 18th home run of the season, a solo shot in the fourth inning.

Gary Thomasson's two-run homer with one out in the 12th inning gave the San Francisco Giants a 7-5 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates. It was Pittsburgh's fifth straight defeat.

Cesar Cedeno hit a tie-breaking sacrifice fly in the seventh inning to lift the Houston Astros over the New York Mets 4-3. The Astros had tied the game with a three-run sixth inning, highlighted by Jose Cruz' two-run double.

Carl Yastrzemski and Bernie Carbo each slugged two home runs and George Scott added his 17th of the season to power the Boston Red Sox over the New York Yankees 10-4. The nationally televised game also saw Yankee Manager Billy Martin and slugger Reggie Jackson almost come to blows during heated confrontation in the New York dugout.

The Chicago White Sox blanked the Oakland A's 2-0 as Ken Kravec hurled a four-hitter and struck out 11 before being relieved in the eighth inning. Chicago's runs were scored on Kevin Bell's sacrifice fly and Jorge Orta's RBI single.

Jim Norris capped a two-run eighth-inning rally with a run-scoring single as the Cleveland Indians edged the Detroit Tigers 5-4. Jason Thompson homered for Detroit.

Deer poaching is expensive proposition

COLUMBIA — The old adage is that what you don't know won't hurt you, but as far as Wayne Porath is concerned, it simply isn't true.

One thing he doesn't know is the amount of deer poached every year in Missouri,but he is quite sure it's hurting him and every other honest deer enthusiast in Missouri.

Porath is a deer biologist for the Department of Conservation.

"About a year ago," he says, "we ran some computer calculations on our deer herd. The indication was that there are a lot ofdeer unaccounted for which die for reasons other than legal hunting."

That included disease and accident, as well as illegal kill, but poaching is the largest single unknown variable in Missouri's deer management program.

Since Porath and fellow deer biologist Ollie Torgerson already had estimated Missouri may lose 10 thousand deer to poachers, finding out the illegal kill could be much more than that was depressing news.

And, since poachers don't follow bucks - only or other management rules, many of the deer paoched are does which normally produce twinfawns and may have a lifetime production of 20 or more deer, meaning that each young doe killed represents a potential of many more deer that are lost.

Considering that Missouri now has nearly a quarter of a million deer hunters and the last two years has had a harvest of more than 40 thousand animals, the illegal kill is far out of the category of petty crime.

In 1973, Sidney Wilcox, a professor at Arizona State Univerisyt, did a survey showing the value of deer as meat alone, not counting the esthetic or other value of a deer hunt. The avenue amount of boneless meat on a Missouri deer was 45 pounds and, at that time, chuck beef was selling for $1.34.

If poachers steel 10 thousand deer a year (and remember Porath feels that may be far too conservative), it represents 450 thousand pounds of venison or $603 thousand at 1973 prices for chuck beef, an equivalent meat.

Finding out Missouri's illegal kill is almost impossible. Outlaws don't advertise their success. Spotlighting deer is a problem that has grownwith the deer herd.

North Missouri, long an exception to poaching prevalence, now has its own widespread problem, including the worst of all poaching situations, the commercial deer thieves.

Maximum fines !500 on each count) are a detterent, but aren't that common. Missouri does not have a confiscation law like that in other states. In Wisconsin, a violator who is convicted may find his gun, car and any other equipment in his possessionat the time of the violation sold at public auction.

As farmers found a few years ago when meat prices were extremely high, the person who poaches deer won't hesitate to rustle livestock too.

Torgerson, writing in the Conservation Department's magazine recently, had perhaps the most pertinent suggestions for helping with th poaching problem: "Turn in violators rather than turning your head! It is amazing what our conservation agents can do with accurate, timely information, such as a license number and vehicle description."

Missouri deer biologists are finding that loss of deer to poachers is more widespread than they'd believed. Computer information indicates many more than the estimated 10 thousand annually may fall to illegal hunters -- and at 10 thousand animals, the economic loss is more than $600 thousand. Open is played twice

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Lanky Hubert Green, constantly talking, gesturing, smiling to a heat-wilted gallery, scrambled to a two-over-par 72 that, surprisingly, enabled him to retain a one-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the United States Open Golf Championship.

Green, now only 18 holes away from the major title that so far has eluded him, composed a 54-hole total of 208, two under par on the Southern Hills Country Club course, 6,873 yards of gently rolling hillsides that were scorched by 90-plus degree temperatures and oppressive humidity.

Big Andy Bean, the tour's most noted alligator-wrestler, was the only other man under par after three rounds of this 77th American national championship.

Bean, who, like Green, spent his boyhood summers in weather similiar to that which turned this event into an endurance contest, shot a 68 and was one under par at 209.

Green, who needs only a major title to confirm his status as one of the game's leading lights, grew up in Birmingham, Ala., and the 6-foot-4, 210-pound Bean learned to wrestle alligators in the swampland of southern Georgia.

They were followed by a group at 210—even par—that included Tom Weiskopf, grimly determined South African Gary Player, unawed outsiders Gary Jacobsen and Don Padgett, along with Terry Diehl and Tom Purtzer, one of those previously obscure young men who dominated the tour in the early seasgn.

Player, who needs this one to complete a career double sweep of the game's four major championships—the U.S. and British Opens, the Masters and PGA—finished birdie, birdie for a 71.

Purtzer shot the same score. Diehl, in the last twosome with Green, had a 73. Weiskopf closed up with a 68.

Jacobson, 24, a mini-tour player from Minnetonka, Minn., and Padgett, 28, who couldn't make it on the pro tour and now is a club pro in Carmel, Ind., were the surprises.

"I expected to have a good tournament and put no limits on how well I'd play," said Jacobsen, who shot a 67. "My position is no surprise whatsoever."

Asked his biggest title so far, he replied: "The Minnesota state junior."

Padgett, son of the national president of the PGA, lost his card after two years of tour activity but unsheathed a magic putter that produced eight one-putts on the glass-slick greens and propelled him to a four-under-par 66, the best round of the tournament.

Sports Shorts

The 1976 major league baseball appears to be livelier than ever. The Los Angeles Dodgers cracked seven home runs in one Chicago game in May.

Longest National League game in April required four hours and 46 minutes. It went 17 innings with the New York Mets beating the Cardinals in St. Louis.

Cincinnati's Reds drew the top two National League crowds at home in April. The two-game total was 106,339 paid fans.

Cesar Cedeno hit safely in 18 straight games for the Houston Astros this spring then came up with an injury.

The Chicago Cubs won four of their first six extra inning games the first month of the 1976 baseball season.

Twenty athletes named "Martin" have played in the major leagues. The most active Martin is Manager Billy Martin of the New York Yankees.

Kentucky Derby winner Bold Forbes trained at Belmont Park in New York for his 1976 Louisville effort. Runner-up Honest Pleasure trained in Florida. The show horse, Elocutionist, trained in Arkansas.

New York Mets manager Joe Frazier has a son, Marty, who is a West Point cadet.

Legislative immunity

By Gary Hardee
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — For about six months each year, Missouri legislators have a privilege the average citizen does not have — immunity from arrest except in cases of "treason, felony or breach of the peace."

This immunity, while the legislat is in session, granted in the Missouri Constitution, allows some legislators to avoid drunken driving arrests.

Rep. William Fickle, D-Kansas City, is the most recent user of the privilege. According to Jefferson City police records, Fickle was ticketed for drunken driving June 1 after his swerving auto forced a police car off the road. Police said Fickle then ran a stop sign before being stopped by officers.

Patrolman Ray Bledsoe said Fickle was unable to stand upright without leaning against this car and could not walk without stumbling. Fickle was taken to the police station and requested to take a breathalyzer test. He refused, claiming legislative immunity.

The next day, Chris Graham, city attorney, stopped police from submitting to the Department of Revenue a notice of Fickle's refusal to take the test. Under the Missouri Constitution, if a person refuses to take a breathalyzer test, the revenue director can revoke that person's drivers license for no more than one year.

Graham says he only was following the law in honoring Fickle's claim of immunity.

"As far as I'm concerned, this case is closed. I did what I felt was correct. I made a decision based on the way the constitution reads," Graham says.

Fickle took a cab home, but Graham says he is not sure what would have happened if the representative insisted upon driving home.

"I don't know. All the law says is that he is privileged from arrest," Graham says. "In a situation like that, it would be a matter of discretion with the police officer."

Graham says the immunity privilege has not been challenged in Missouri's courts.

"Unfortunately there is no court decision to go by," he says. "I think it (the constitutional provision) is clear, but I'm sure there are people who disagree with me. Until someone asks for a determination we'll have to go with what's on the books."

The Oklahoma Supreme Court was asked for an interpretation of that state's immunity privilege last April, and Oklahoma legislators now no longer have immunity from arrest for minor criminal offenses.

Gene Howard, president pro tem of the Oklahoma Senate, and W. P. Willis, speaker of the Oklahoma House, requested the ruling, hoping the court would stop Roger Webb, commissioner of public safety, from enforcing drunken driving arrests of Oklahoma legislators.

The Oklahoma court said that the limits of the immunity privilege were defined in English common law "as being a privilege extended to arrest only in civil law.

"It may be safely concluded," the courts said, "that the privilege from arrest in America is, in no case, greater than the same privilege in England."

The Oklahoma and Missouri immunity privileges are the same, except that the Oklahoma court has determined that the provision only delays arrest "so as to avoid distracting members of the legislature from their public duties.

"The privilege, to whatever extent it may apply, is exclusively a privilege from arrest and not a bar to prosecution," the Oklahoma court said.

Missouri's immunity provision lasts from 15 days before each legislative session to 15 days after the session has ended. But no court decision has determined whether a legislator can be prosecuted after the provision expires for the year.

For a drunken driving charge, Graham says there could be no prosecution because a breathalyzer test must be given shortly after the arrest, and if a legislator claims immunity from arrest, no test can be given.

Without the breathalyzer test, the city would have no evidence.

Graham also is unsure how many times a legislator could claim immunity.

"The constitution doesn't make any exceptions. Legislators are protected from 15 days before the session to 15 days after the session," Graham says.

The only opinion about the immunity privilege on record in Missouri is an April 8, 1953 letter from John Dalton, former attorney general, to two state representatives stating that "speeding and running a stop light are neither offenses comprehended with in the phrase 'breach of peace.'"

In light of the Oklahoma ruling, Rep. Jim Strong, R-Jefferson City, says he will check into a possible Missouri court ruling. Strong sponsored bills in 1974 and 1975 that would have allowed the public to vote on whether they wanted legislators to have the immunity privilege.

Legislative immunity

By Gary Hardee
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — For about six months each year, Missouri legislators have a privilege the average citizen does not have — immunity from arrest except in cases of "treason, felony or breach of the peace."

This immunity, while the legislat is in session, granted in the Missouri Constitution, allows some legislators to avoid drunken driving arrests.

Rep. William Fickle, D-Kansas City, is the most recent user of the privilege. According to Jefferson City police records, Fickle was ticketed for drunken driving June 1 after his swerving auto forced a police car off the road. Police said Fickle then ran a stop sign before being stopped by officers.

Patrolman Ray Bledsoe said Fickle was unable to stand upright without leaning against this car and could not walk without stumbling. Fickle was taken to the police station and requested to take a breathalyzer test. He refused, claiming legislative immunity.

The next day, Chris Graham, city attorney, stopped police from submitting to the Department of Revenue a notice of Fickle's refusal to take the test. Under the Missouri Constitution, if a person refuses to take a breathalyzer test, the revenue director can revoke that person's drivers license for no more than one year.

Graham says he only was following the law in honoring Fickle's claim of immunity.

"As far as I'm concerned, this case is closed. I did what I felt was correct. I made a decision based on the way the constitution reads," Graham says.

Fickle took a cab home, but Graham says he is not sure what would have happened if the representative insisted upon driving home.

"I don't know. All the law says is that he is privileged from arrest," Graham says. "In a situation like that, it would be a matter of discretion with the police officer."

Graham says the immunity privilege has not been challenged in Missouri's courts.

"Unfortunately there is no court decision to go by," he says. "I think it (the constitutional provision) is clear, but I'm sure there are people who disagree with me. Until someone asks for a determination we'll have to go with what's on the books."

The Oklahoma Supreme Court was asked for an interpretation of that state's immunity privilege last April, and Oklahoma legislators now no longer have immunity from arrest for minor criminal offenses.

Gene Howard, president pro tem of the Oklahoma Senate, and W. P. Willis, speaker of the Oklahoma House, requested the ruling, hoping the court would stop Roger Webb, commissioner of public safety, from enforcing drunken driving arrests of Oklahoma legislators.

The Oklahoma court said that the limits of the immunity privilege were defined in English common law "as being a privilege extended to arrest only in civil law.

"It may be safely concluded," the courts said, "that the privilege from arrest in America is, in no case, greater than the same privilege in England."

The Oklahoma and Missouri immunity privileges are the same, except that the Oklahoma court has determined that the provision only delays arrest "so as to avoid distracting members of the legislature from their public duties.

"The privilege, to whatever extent it may apply, is exclusively a privilege from arrest and not a bar to prosecution," the Oklahoma court said.

Missouri's immunity provision lasts from 15 days before each legislative session to 15 days after the session has ended. But no court decision has determined whether a legislator can be prosecuted after the provision expires for the year.

For a drunken driving charge, Graham says there could be no prosecution because a breathalyzer test must be given shortly after the arrest, and if a legislator claims immunity from arrest, no test can be given.

Without the breathalyzer test, the city would have no evidence.

Graham also is unsure how many times a legislator could claim immunity.

"The constitution doesn't make any exceptions. Legislators are protected from 15 days before the session to 15 days after the session," Graham says.

The only opinion about the immunity privilege on record in Missouri is an April 8, 1953 letter from John Dalton, former attorney general, to two state representatives stating that "speeding and running a stop light are neither offenses comprehended with in the phrase 'breach of peace.'"

In light of the Oklahoma ruling, Rep. Jim Strong, R-Jefferson City, says he will check into a possible Missouri court ruling. Strong sponsored bills in 1974 and 1975 that would have allowed the public to vote on whether they wanted legislators to have the immunity privilege.

Burial will follow at Memorial Park Cemetery in Sikeston.

Shoplift report stuns Farrah

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Television star Farrah Fawcett+Majors said Saturday she was "stunned" at a published report that she had been accused of shoplifting seven years ago. She said she didn't steal anything but just "took justice into my own hands."

The 30-year-old actress who skyrocketed to stardom in the private eye series "Charlie's Angels" said she took items of clothing from two California shops in 1970 as a protest against the shopkeepers' refusal to exchange unsatisfactory items she had purchased.

"I was making a demonstration, and at the time I felt it was the only thing that I could do," she said.

Her comments came in response to a story in the New York Post that she was arrested and fined on two occasions for taking dresses and coats from a Los Angeles boutique and a shop in suburban San Fernando Valley.

"I'm stunned that anybody seven years later could take it seriously," Miss Fawcett+Majors said.

Lawyer Ronald S. Rosen, who currently represents Miss Fawcett+Majors, said that in both incidents the actress, who was a model at the time, "wanted to exchange the merchandise. In both cases, they refused, so she took like merchandise right in front of everyone and walked out.

"Shoplifters don't act in that manner," he said. "They are usually very secretive about things. She just did it openly in an argument."

Elliot Abelson, Miss FawcettMajors' lawyer at the time of the incidents, said the actress was charged with petty theft but pleaded guilty to the lesser charge of trespassing in both cases.

She was fined $125 in August 1970 for taking two dresses from Judy's Boutique in Los Angeles and was placed on 18 months probation and fined $265 in November 1970 for taking two coats from a San Fernando Valley shop, Abelson said.

The fine in the second case was suspended, he said, on condition that Miss Fawcett+Majors undergo psychiatric treatment. She did [illegible] about six months, he said.

The second charge was dismissed and the conviction expunged from her records after she completed her probation, Abelson said.

"I thi[illegible]omething as insignificant as this is being brough[illegible] he said. "There have been no incidences whatsoever since then, and she has no prior record."

"We need a stable family life to make us better servants of the people. So those of you who are living in sin, I hope you get married."

The President was asked in the interview whether he thinks a White House staffer living with someone out of wedlock would reflect on his administration?

"I don't want to equate it to the administration," he said. "I think it sets an example on a nationwide basis that is bad."

Carter said also that he has written memos to his key staff members and to his Cabinet secretaries instructing them to spend time with their families.

"This is important to me," Carter said. "And I think it's good for my administration and good for the country because what goes on in Washington, as reported to the rest of the world, the nation at least, has a great impact on the sanctity of marriage and the need to hold the family together."

Resting his head on the back of his chair, Carter reminisced about ideas on marriage and family life when he was a child.

"I think there was a much greater sense of social pressure to hold the family together," he said. "It was a disgrace, at least where I grew up, for a family to be separated. Divorce was not accepted as part of life."

He continued: "And I think there was a much greater sense of religious commitment, that the marriage vow was sacred, and not only was the love of a partner an important part of it, but an obligation to be involved in honesty, integrity, truthfulness and faithfulness — in times of adversity and in times when the ardor of physical love waned. There was almost a sense of betrayal when one left a marriage partner."

President Carter, the parent, is now a grandfather. What does that mean to him this Fathers Day?. "It's almost as delightful to have a grandchild as it is to have one of your own children... We are now experiencing the same delight in seeing Jason (age 22 months) and James (almost 4 months) develop without the constant responsibility for their care, and that ability to move in and out of the life of a grandchild and not have the constant responsibility for them is an additional element of the joy."

bound lane and struck an approaching motor home driven by Frank D. Sandstorm, 54, of Ozark.

Felty and a passenger in his vehicle, Roberta E. Felty, 73, received injuries and were taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

A Harviell woman was moderately injured and two persons received minor injuries in a two- vehicle accident at 6:40 p.m. Friday 13 miles south of Poplar Bluff on Highway 67.

The accident occurred when a northbound car driven by wilma Mae Wilson, 59, of Harviell was being followed by two other cars. A northbound car driven by Randall Harold Lewis, 27, of Rector, Ark. pulled out from behind the Wilson car to pass as it was turning left. The Lewis car struck the Wilson car in the side.

Lewis was cited for improper passing.

The Wilson woman received moderate injuries and was taken to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff. Lewis and a passenger in his car, Bonnie Lewis, 26, received minor injuries but were not taken to a hospital.

Survey finds no-fault insurance works better

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new federal survey of no-fault automobile insurance plans in 16 states concludes that no-fault provides quicker and more equitable benefits than does the traditional liability system.

"No-fault automobile insurance works," said the Department of Transportation.

The report said the 16 states with full-fledged no-fault insurance plans "would appear to confirm the basic soundness of the theory and the feasibility of the theory's implementation."

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, released the DOT study. He said he will use it in hearings beginning June 27 on his proposal for federal no-fault minimum standards.

"The DOT study confirms that good no-fault laws are working efficiently and effectively to compensate auto accident victims," Magnuson said. "Perhaps now we can enact a uniform, sensible statute and stop this foot-dragging."

Compensation for injuries or damage in auto accidents traditionally is funded by liability insurance. Under that system, blame has to be fixed on one party whose insurance then compensates the victim. Both parties often have to hire attorneys and wage long, expensive legal battles before any benefits are paid out.

The delay in payments, inequitable benefit awards and a large build up of court cases led to a movement to substitute no-fault for the liability insurance system. Massachusetts was the first state to pass a no-fault plan in 1970, 15 other states have enacted comprehensive no-fault plans and other states have adopted parts of the no-fault concept.

In the 16 states studied by the DOT, no-fault insurance had three common features: mandatory economic loss benefits were available to all victims regardless of fault; these benefits replaced liability insurance for compensating the same loss; and victims were restricted in their right to sue for damages for such intangibles as "pain and suffering."

The states studied are Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Kansas, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Pennsylvania and Utah.

The report concluded that:

—No-fault plans provide more adequate and equitable benefits than the liability system, especially for seriously injured accident victims and for victims of single-car accidents where no second person could be blamed.

For example, a Colorado bicyclist who ran a stop sign and was hit by a car covered by liability insurance so far has run up $8,201 in medical bills. None of those bills would have been covered by liability insurance because the bicylist could not have successfully sued the car's driver, who was not at fault.

Under no-fault, the bicyclist's bills are covered because the system pays her medical costs regardless of fault.

Connecticut estimates that 25 per cent more accident victims recover for economic losses under no-fault insurance than under fault. Kentucky said that of the 53.8 per cent increase in the losses incurred in its ficst year of no-fault insurance, about 16 per cent were persons who would not have gotten benefits under the tort system.

—Payments are paid promptly for economic losses under no-fault insurance, a marked improvement over other plans, the DOT said.

Michigan said almost all auto accident claims are settled within 30 days. Colorado said 59 per cent of its no-fault claims are settled within three months and 91 per cent within six months. Massachusetts said 63.3 per cent of its no-fault claims are paid within 90 days compared to only 40.5 per cent for traditional liability claims.

—Insurance premiums can be lowered when no-fault benefits are coordinated with benefits from other sources.

"Significant net premium savings appear to be available to policyholders in states which mandate the coordination of no-fault auto insurance with other public and private insurance coverages," the report said, noting that New York, New Jersey and Michigan have had particular success.

—The cost of administering no-fault auto insurance is probably lower, the report said, because claims are simpler to make and fulfill.

2 robbery suspects in jail

NEW MADRID--Two armed robbery suspects, identified as Roger Shavers, 24, of Homestown and Richard Jones, 24, Malden, are in the New Madrid County jail pending further investigation and charges.

Jones was arrested at 9 p.m. Friday and Shavers was taken into custody at 1:30 a.m. Saturday after they allegedly were involved in taking $20 at gunpoint off of a pool table at Trotter's Cafe on Highway 162 East in Portageville.

Reportedly, the two had been playing pool and had lost $20 in the game. An undetermined amount of money was laying on the table when Jones allegedly pulled a .32-caliber revolver, fired a shot into the wall, took $20 and left the balance of the money on the table.

No one was reported injured during the shooting.

New Madrid stabbing causes woman's arrest

NEW MADRID — Margaret Morris, 47, of Route One was arrested about noon Saturday suspected of felonious assault upon Bradie Bledsoe, 49, of New Madrid, who suffered two severe cuts on the left hand and was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital at Sikeston.

Bledsoe was stabbed at 11:45 a.m. behind the Brotherhood Club on Russell Street with a broken wine bottle allegedly wielded by the woman, according to New Madrid County Deputy Sheriff Sam Hinton.

Hinton said the couple had reportedly been in an argument Friday night.

The woman has been released pending filing of charges.

Officer injured as fires damage 2 Sikeston homes

Fire destroyed the top floor of the Howard Brewer home, 108 W. Gladys St., and gutted a house at 504 Lanning St. in separate incidents Friday.

Firemen were called to the Brewer home at 6:55 p.m. The roof was caving in when they arrived.

Three pumpers and a ladder truck, plus 21 men, fought the fire for about five hours, and were able to keep the fire from spreading to houses on each side of the burning house.

Injured in the fire was Lt. Jim Terrell, who suffered smoke inhalation.

He was admitted to Missouri Delta Community Hospital where he was treated and kept overnight for observation. He was released about 11 a.m. Saturday.

Terrell was injured at 8 p.m. Friday. About the same time -- at 8:02 p.m. Friday -- another fire broke out at 504 Lanning St. The name of occupant or owner was not available Saturday night.

Morehouse and Miner Fire Department trucks -- which had been called in to cover the Sikeston fire houses since all the city trucks were at the Gladys Street fire -- wen to the Lanning Street fire. Sikeston city firemen worked the fire, which gutted the house.

At the Brewer home, the bottom floor also received smoke and water damage.

Cause of the fire was not determined.

Firemen also answered a call at 6:52 p.m. Saturday for a grass fire along the Frisco Railroad on Salcedo Road.

They were at the scene about 10 minutes.

Ordinary 1st night turns into nightmare at camp

LOCUST GROVE, Okla. (AP) — One-hundred-and-forty Girl Scouts, fluttering with the excitement of their first day at a two-week summer camp here, stubbornly settled down in their tents last Sunday night.

Some girls carried on until past midnight, but a bed check at 1:30 a.m. by counselors showed all was in order.

"The girls are always rowdy the first night out," Barbara Day, camp administrator, recalled a few days later. "The girls are always hard to get to sleep the first night. They giggle and yell and play games."

Michelle Guse, Lori Lee Farmer and Doris Denise Milner probably shared in the first night frivolities. They were assigned to the last tent in a rough semi-circle arrangement, with each tent about 15 feet from the next.

The scout group was assigned to several campsites, each comprised of about 28 scouts and four counselors. At 6 a.m., an alarm shattered the morning silence in counselors' tent at the Kiowa campsite. One of the counselors got up and walked toward a shower area.

About 150 feet from her tent, she noticed three crumpled sleeping bags lying alongside one another under a tree. Two were completely zipped up; the other revealed the ghastly sight of a strangled young girl.

The counselor ran back to her tent and awoke the others. They all returned to the site, only to confirm the obvious: at least one girl was dead. One of the counselors screamed.

They rushed to camp headquarters and summoned Barbara Day, her husband, Richard, and the camp nurse. Richard Day ran his hand over the zipped up sleeping bags and knew immediately what they contained. It took only minutes to deduct that the three victims were the Guse, Farmer and Milner girls. The nurse became hysterical.

Barbara Day remained calm as she went to call police.

"Two weeks ago I went to the Locust Grove Police Department. I wanted to know who to call to get the quickest and fullest attention," Mrs. Day later told Michael Wheat, a reporter for a local newspaper who doubles as a police reporter. Wheat was among the first on the scene.

Mrs. Day's first call yielded a busy signal. "I called the operator and told her it was an emergency," she said. "The operator broke in on the line, and I told the dispatcher that we had three dead girls." The Vinita headquarters of the Highway Patrol logged the call at 6:24 a.m.

She was born Feb. 19, 1912 in Morehouse, Mo.

Surviving are: one son, John "Dub" Chavers of San Jose; a daughter, Mrs. Patsy Martenn of Victorville, Ca.; a brother, Harry Murrie of St. Ann; two sisters, Mrs. Barbara Hellmann of St. Louis and Mrs. Helen Owings of Morehouse; and six grandchildren and two great-grand children.

Friends may call after 9:30 a.m. Tuesday at Nunnelee Funeral Chapel in Sikeston, where services are scheduled at 1 p.m. Tuesday with the Rev. Larry Rice, pastor of Emmanuel Baptist Church, officiating.

Burial will follow at Memorial Park Cemetery in Sikeston.

Shoplift report stuns Farrah

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Television star Farrah Fawcett+Majors said Saturday she was "stunned" at a published report that she had been accused of shoplifting seven years ago. She said she didn't steal anything but just "took justice into my own hands."

The 30-year-old actress who skyrocketed to stardom in the private eye series "Charlie's Angels" said she took items of clothing from two California shops in 1970 as a protest against the shopkeepers' refusal to exchange unsatisfactory items she had purchased.

"I was making a demonstration, and at the time I felt it was the only thing that I could do," she said.

Her comments came in response to a story in the New York Post that she was arrested and fined on two occasions for taking dresses and coats from a Los Angeles boutique and a shop in suburban San Fernando Valley.

"I'm stunned that anybody seven years later could take it seriously," Miss Fawcett+Majors said.

Lawyer Ronald S. Rosen, who currently represents Miss Fawcett+Majors, said that in both incidents the actress, who was a model at the time, "wanted to exchange the merchandise. In both cases, they refused, so she took like merchandise right in front of everyone and walked out.

"Shoplifters don't act in that manner," he said. "They are usually very secretive about things. She just did it openly in an argument."

Elliot Abelson, Miss FawcettMajors' lawyer at the time of the incidents, said the actress was charged with petty theft but pleaded guilty to the lesser charge of trespassing in both cases.

She was fined $125 in August 1970 for taking two dresses from Judy's Boutique in Los Angeles and was placed on 18 months probation and fined $265 in November 1970 for taking two coats from a San Fernando Valley shop, Abelson said.

The fine in the second case was suspended, he said, on condition that Miss Fawcett+Majors undergo psychiatric treatment. She did [illegible] about six months, he said.

The second charge was dismissed and the conviction expunged from her records after she completed her probation, Abelson said.

"I thi[illegible]mething as insignificant as this is being brough[illegible]," he said. "There have been no incidences whatsoever since then, and she has no prior record."

"We need a stable family life to make us better servants of the people. So those of you who are living in sin, I hope you get married."

The President was asked in the interview whether he thinks a White House staffer living with someone out of wedlock would reflect on his administration?

"I don't want to equate it to the administration," he said. "I think it sets an example on a nationwide basis that is bad."

Carter said also that he has written memos to his key staff members and to his Cabinet secretaries instructing them to spend time with their families.

"This is important to me," Carter said. "And I think it's good for my administration and good for the country because what goes on in Washington, as reported to the rest of the world, the nation at least, has a great impact on the sanctity of marriage and the need to hold the family together."

Resting his head on the back of his chair, Carter reminisced about ideas on marriage and family life when he was a child.

"I think there was a much greater sense of social pressure to hold the family together," he said. "It was a disgrace, at least where I grew up, for a family to be separated. Divorce was not accepted as part of life."

He continued: "And I think there was a much greater sense of religious commitment, that the marriage vow was sacred, and not only was the love of a partner an important part of it, but an obligation to be involved in honesty, integrity, truthfulness and faithfulness — in times of adversity and in times when the ardor of physical love waned. There was almost a sense of betrayal when one left a marriage partner."

President Carter, the parent, is now a grandfather. What does that mean to him this Fathers Day?. "It's almost as delightful to have a grandchild as it is to have one of your own children... We are now experiencing the same delight in seeing Jason (age 22 months) and James (almost 4 months) develop without the constant responsibility for their care, and that ability to move in and out of the life of a grandchild and not have the constant responsibility for them is an additional element of the joy."

bound lane and struck an approaching motor home driven by Frank D. Sandstorm, 54, of Ozark.

Felty and a passenger in his vehicle, Roberta E. Felty, 73, received injuries and were taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

A Harviell woman was moderately injured and two persons received minor injuries in a two- vehicle accident at 6:40 p.m. Friday 13 miles south of Poplar Bluff on Highway 67.

The accident occurred when a northbound car driven by wilma Mae Wilson, 59, of Harviell was being followed by two other cars. A northbound car driven by Randall Harold Lewis, 27, of Rector, Ark. pulled out from behind the Wilson car to pass as it was turning left. The Lewis car struck the Wilson car in the side.

Lewis was cited for improper passing.

The Wilson woman received moderate injuries and was taken to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff. Lewis and a passenger in his car, Bonnie Lewis, 26, received minor injuries but were not taken to a hospital.

Survey finds no-fault insurance works better

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new federal survey of no-fault automobile insurance plans in 16 states concludes that no-fault provides quicker and more equitable benefits than does the traditional liability system.

"No-fault automobile insurance works," said the Department of Transportation.

The report said the 16 states with full-fledged no-fault insurance plans "would appear to confirm the basic soundness of the theory and the feasibility of the theory's implementation."

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, released the DOT study. He said he will use it in hearings beginning June 27 on his proposal for federal no-fault minimum standards.

"The DOT study confirms that good no-fault laws are working efficiently and effectively to compensate auto accident victims," Magnuson said. "Perhaps now we can enact a uniform, sensible statute and stop this foot-dragging."

Compensation for injuries or damage in auto accidents traditionally is funded by liability insurance. Under that system, blame has to be fixed on one party whose insurance then compensates the victim. Both parties often have to hire attorneys and wage long, expensive legal battles before any benefits are paid out.

The delay in payments, inequitable benefit awards and a large build up of court cases led to a movement to substitute no-fault for the liability insurance system. Massachusetts was the first state to pass a no-fault plan in 1970, 15 other states have enacted comprehensive no-fault plans and other states have adopted parts of the no-fault concept.

In the 16 states studied by the DOT, no-fault insurance had three common features: mandatory economic loss benefits were available to all victims regardless of fault; these benefits replaced liability insurance for compensating the same loss; and victims were restricted in their right to sue for damages for such intangibles as "pain and suffering."

The states studied are Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Kansas, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Pennsylvania and Utah.

The report concluded that:

—No-fault plans provide more adequate and equitable benefits than the liability system, especially for seriously injured accident victims and for victims of single-car accidents where no second person could be blamed.

For example, a Colorado bicyclist who ran a stop sign and was hit by a car covered by liability insurance so far has run up $8,201 in medical bills. None of those bills would have been covered by liability insurance because the bicylist could not have successfully sued the car's driver, who was not at fault.

Under no-fault, the bicyclist's bills are covered because the system pays her medical costs regardless of fault.

Connecticut estimates that 25 per cent more accident victims recover for economic losses under no-fault insurance than under fault. Kentucky said that of the 53.8 per cent increase in the losses incurred in its ficst year of no-fault insurance, about 16 per cent were persons who would not have gotten benefits under the tort system.

—Payments are paid promptly for economic losses under no-fault insurance, a marked improvement over other plans, the DOT said.

Michigan said almost all auto accident claims are settled within 30 days. Colorado said 59 per cent of its no-fault claims are settled within three months and 91 per cent within six months. Massachusetts said 63.3 per cent of its no-fault claims are paid within 90 days compared to only 40.5 per cent for traditional liability claims.

—Insurance premiums can be lowered when no-fault benefits are coordinated with benefits from other sources.

"Significant net premium savings appear to be available to policyholders in states which mandate the coordination of no-fault auto insurance with other public and private insurance coverages," the report said, noting that New York, New Jersey and Michigan have had particular success.

—The cost of administering no-fault auto insurance is probably lower, the report said, because claims are simpler to make and fulfill.

Bank of Sikeston holds employe reunion

As part of its 90th Anniversary celebration, the Bank of Sikeston was host June 11th, at a reception for its past and present employees who came to work for the bank prior to 1970. The event was held at the main bank in downtown Sikeston.

Edward C. Matthews, Jr., president of the bank, stated that the purpose of the reunion was to honor those members of the banking family who had played such an important part in making the bank what it is today, and believes this to be the first time former employees have been so honored by any bank in our area.

About 80 bank employees and their spouses attended.

Among those present was Marietta Twitty Whitworth (Mrs. Lennie), who was the first woman teller ever to be employed by the Bank of Sikeston, having begun her employment in 1941.

Also in the group were five present and past employees who were hired before 1940. Two of these, Pauline Husher and William S. Corrigan are still active in the bank.

Another group of honorees were 11 past and former employees who were employed before 1950. Three of these, Audrey Beck, Betty Boyd and Eleznor Hahn, are still in full time employment.

Area bankers complete training at Baton Rouge

BATON ROUGE, La.— Three bankers from Sikeston Mo. and one from Charleston, Mo., graduated from the School of Banking of the South on June 3.

They are: George Camp and Scott Matthews, vice presidents at the Bank of Sikeston; Roger L. Tolliver, vice president of the First National Bank in Sikeston; and Raymond D. Hinds, vice president of First Security State Bank in Charleston.

The banking school, held annually at Louisiana State University, completed its 28th two-week session, providing advanced study in all aspects of bank management, economics, investments and related subjects.

Sponsored by 15 Southern state bankers associations, the school requires attendance at LSU for three years, plus extensive home study assignments between sessions. This year, there were 1,227 banker-students participating in all. The faculty faculty consists of 115 leading bankers, educators, and professionals in accounting and law from throughout the nation.

Walter B. Stuart, III, director of the School of Banking, told this year's class that "we must define and redefine the role that the commercial bank is to play in the future."

Stuart, who is vice chairman of First National Bank of Commerce, New Orleans, said, "Over the past decade, our traditional role has been challenged." He emphasized the importance of educational programs such as the School of Banking to prepare bankers to meet these challenges.

During their three years at LSU, bankers attend a total of 180 hours of classes, plus thirty hours of review, organized evening study, and written final examinations at the end of each session.

Existing home sales booming

NEW YORK (AP) — What are home buyers up to?

Higher prices and perhaps higher mortgage rates, to cite two things. But the housing scenario in general doesn't lend itself to easy answers; it's riddled with mysteries.

One of the riddles is speculation, at a time when speculation seems to be growing dormant in some other areas of the economy.

Fears about interest rates and inflation, for example, have begun to abate in recent days, slowly but positively, as Washington continues to pour out bushel baskets of strong economic indicators.

As a result, a calm seems to be descending on some stock market analysts who had been frightened out of their blue chips for most of the past 16 months by the two leering "I"s of inflation and interest rates. They are now beginning to suggest that corporate stocks might benefit from the feeling of equilibrium.

Some of the big banks already have declared they are heartened by some recent economic trends and are proclaiming the imminent return to less inflationary times. Interest rates may rise, they say, but not ominously.

But going against the mood, in a manner far from fully understood, is the housing market.

In May, for the first time in four months, the level of mortgage rates on new homes rose, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported. The rise was small, to 8.96 per cent from 8.94 per cent in April, but the direction's the thing.

Sales of new homes have been strong, but existing home sales are booming, and so are prices. The median price of an existing single-family home rose $1,000 in April to $42,000.

But the national median price tells only part of the story. In the West, for example, the median price rose $3,800 in April, reaching $57,200. And if the survey were limited to California, the increase would have been even higher.

In that state houses are purchased for resale. The home buyer, in effect, has put himself in the position of a middleman, acquiring properties not to live in but to sell for immediate profit.

The question that cannot be answered is whether the phenomenon is regional or national. So far the California type of speculation has been rare in other areas of the country, but you must remember that many fevers as well as sound ideas have spread eastward from the coast.

At any rate, the existing home market is soaring. In April alone some 310,000 resale transactions took place, representing a total market value of more than $14 billion, according to the National Association of Realtors.

The April sales performance translates into a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.3 million units, which the Realtors say is a "healthy 17.4 per cent above the level of a year ago."

More than one-third of all resale homes now are priced above $50,000, in contrast to just over 10 per cent four years ago. With prices rising steadily, the speculative appeal is obvious.

Workshops to offer music and metrics

CAPE GIRARDEAU— Short-term workshops in choral music and the metric system are scheduled next week on the Southeast Missouri State University campus.

The workshop in choral music will run, subject to sufficient enrollment, June 23-25 and may be taken for one semester hour of either graduate or undergraduate credit. It is scheduled to be in session from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. on the first two days and from 9 a.m. to noon on the final day.

Fee for the workshop will be $25. Students who wish room and board during the period will pay an additional $50.

Two credit hours of either graduate or undergraduate credit will be allowed for the workshop in the metric system, which is designed for elementary teachers. It will meet daily from 1 to 5 p.m. June 20 through Junly 1. Fee is $40.

Participants will consider the history and reasons for using the metric system, relationships between the English system of measure and the metric system, and techniques of measure and calculations in the metric system.

This workshop has materialized but additional students may enroll.

More information about either workshop may be obtained by contacting the Office of Continuing Education at Southeast Missouri State. The telephone number is 314-334-8211, Ext. 254.

Americans spending heavily on luxuries

NEW YORK (AP) — Tremors in the consumer confidence indices notwithstanding, a lot of money is being spent by Americans in this first half of 1977, on houses, cars, food and luxuries, among other things.

If current rates continue, more houses — new and resale — will be acquired this year than in any year in history. Car sales are booming. Food sales — well, good times or bad, families do their best not to cut back on nutrition.

And luxuries? Note that Tiffany & Co. reported the best first-quarter in its 141-year history, aided by its ability to display a $100,000 ring in less space than it takes another retailer to show a $2 ashtray.

But the rich are different, it has been said, and this comment might be especially true today. Consumer analysts continue to note that much of the buying these days is a by an affluent one-third of the population.

The other two-thirds, it is alleged, are hurting. They are pressed merely to pay their bills; they cannot consider committing money to a better future; they are too busy trying to make do today.

Yes, but they are spending too. Consumer installment credit outstanding now totals a record $182.26 billion, 12.3 per cent higher than a year ago (deduct 5 or 6 per cent for inflation). New credit obligations are being assumed at a record or near-record pace.

Simultaneously, the savings rate has plunged, from about 7.5 per cent in the final quarter of 1976 to about 4.8 per cent in the first quarter of 1977. Families are dipping into savings to pay bills, you might say.

If this is your interpretation, you have company. Some consumer analysts maintain that families have come through the harsh winter in bad shape, forced to use their credit cards to pay for heating and other bills.

The financial pressures on households, it is said, are gradually removing the consumer as the driving force in the expansion. If business spending doesn't take up the slack, it is argued, the expansion might end.

As usual, there is disagreement.

Citibank's Economic Week concedes "it is true that new extensions of consumer installment debt rose to 16.8 per cent of disposale income in the first quarter," but it questions the worried interpretations of this.

In words that are underlined, it continues: "It is also true that this same percentage is a full point below the ones that prevailed from late 1972 to the middle of 1973, the peak before the last recession began."

Robert Johnson, executive director of Purdue University's Credit Research Center, notes that repayments as a percentage of disposable income in the first quarter were only 14.7 per cent. "We've seen it as high as 16 or 17 per cent," he said.

Old homes see remodeling boom

by Crockett Scott

Local capital is joining forces with small town carpenters, electricians and contractors in many small towns of the Midwest and Mid-South these days to buy-up and rehabilitate numerous older homes which have been sitting empty rotting away in the sun, wind, sleet and rain.

A foolish endeavor? Not on your life, contend these these entrepreneurs.

Rather, an excellent long term investment, plus immediate income and tax shelter. And also a big plus for the community's tax base: and an asset which the city fathers can utilize to sell new industry on the benefits of moving to the local area.

With carpenters, electricians and other professional tradesmen such as plumbers and painters teaming up with contractors, and bankers and private capital, production costs are held to a minimum and the quality of work is high, a North Missouri banker told your correspondent.

"And though a great many young couples who need a place to live have looked down their noses at old homes, to snap up a trailer for $12,000 to $115,000 and more, are now turning to rehabilitated older homes, if the terms are right--low down payments, and extended financing.

"A selling job is needed, of course, "Said the banker;" and careful screening of applicants is a must. But there's a lot to sell in an older home. Many of them 50 to 75 years old, can stand up unshaken in a windstorm that would make a shambles of many newer homes;--and and kindling wood cut of lots of trailers."

Purchases of these older homes often can be made through straw parties for the price of the lot, as market value of the oldies is "just about nothing", some North Missouri and and central Illinois bankers note.

In a community a hundred miles or so north of St. Louis, local investors have been buying up three and four story mansions from out of the past and converting them into five and six family apartments.

These are old family homes in the wheat and corn belt whose prosperous farmer-owners of other generations reared large broods of children. In those days the farmers moved to town after they got rich from farming and their homes often were bigger than small town hotels.

Many of them frame dwellings but solidly built, are easily convertible to apartment houses.

In many communities older homes, vacant for years, have been neglected by their owners with the vagaries of nature taking considerable tell. However, the underpinnings frequently are in good shape and provide a solid base for repairs.

Wiring, of course, has to be replaced, to meet current demands of major appliances. And if gas has not been used for several years, these homes often are required to be heated by electricity, as power companies may not hook them up to gas.

And often is installed in the renovation program, to obtain maximum benefits for heating and air-conditioning. Frequently, a central air conditioning unit is installed.

Most communities have more small cottages than they do Buckingham palaces, of course, and these too are easily reconditionable; even more so in the opinion of local rehabilitation teams; and just as profitable, if care is exercised in renting the finished product, or in selling it; to stable, responsible people, that is.

City councils usually are very cooperative with rehabilitation efforts, because deteriorating neighborhoods are brought back to taxable standards; and available housing helps bring new industry to the community.

Renevation costs of these structures (when they are rented) can be amortized, of course, against income taxes, usually over a ten year period, or less, in most instances, depending on the estimated life of the repairs. Thus capital obtains a fast written-off; and the investment, if properly maintained, continues to rise in value.

Bank of Sikeston holds employe reunion

As part of its 90th Anniversary celebration, the Bank of Sikeston was host June 11th, at a reception for its past and present employees who came to work for the bank prior to 1970. The event was held at the main bank in downtown Sikeston.

Edward C. Matthews, Jr., president of the bank, stated that the purpose of the reunion was to honor those members of the banking family who had played such an important part in making the bank what it is today, and believes this to be the first time former employees have been so honored by any bank in our area.

About 80 bank employees and their spouses attended.

Among those present was Marietta Twitty Whitworth (Mrs. Lennie), who was the first woman teller ever to be employed by the Bank of Sikeston, having begun her employment in 1941.

Also in the group were five present and past employees who were hired before 1940. Two of these, Pauline Husher and William S. Corrigan are still active in the bank.

Another group of honorees were 11 past and former employees who were employed before 1950. Three of these, Audrey Beck, Betty Boyd and Eleznor Hahn, are still in full time employment.

Area bankers complete training at Baton Rouge

BATON ROUGE, La.— Three bankers from Sikeston Mo. and one from Charleston, Mo., graduated from the School of Banking of the South on June 3.

They are: George Camp and Scott Matthews, vice presidents at the Bank of Sikeston; Roger L. Tolliver, vice president of the First National Bank in Sikeston; and Raymond D. Hinds, vice president of First Security State Bank in Charleston.

The banking school, held annually at Louisiana State University, completed its 28th two-week session, providing advanced study in all aspects of bank management, economics, investments and related subjects.

Sponsored by 15 Southern state bankers associations, the school requires attendance at LSU for three years, plus extensive home study assignments between sessions. This year, there were 1,227 banker-students participating in all. The faculty faculty consists of 115 leading bankers, educators, and professionals in accounting and law from throughout the nation.

Walter B. Stuart, III, director of the School of Banking, told this year's class that "we must define and redefine the role that the commercial bank is to play in the future."

Stuart, who is vice chairman of First National Bank of Commerce, New Orleans, said, "Over the past decade, our traditional role has been challenged." He emphasized the importance of educational programs such as the School of Banking to prepare bankers to meet these challenges.

During their three years at LSU, bankers attend a total of 180 hours of classes, plus thirty hours of review, organized evening study, and written final examinations at the end of each session.

Existing home sales booming

NEW YORK (AP) — What are home buyers up to?

Higher prices and perhaps higher mortgage rates, to cite two things. But the housing scenario in general doesn't lend itself to easy answers; it's riddled with mysteries.

One of the riddles is speculation, at a time when speculation seems to be growing dormant in some other areas of the economy.

Fears about interest rates and inflation, for example, have begun to abate in recent days, slowly but positively, as Washington continues to pour out bushel baskets of strong economic indicators.

As a result, a calm seems to be descending on some stock market analysts who had been frightened out of their blue chips for most of the past 16 months by the two leering "I"s of inflation and interest rates. They are now beginning to suggest that corporate stocks might benefit from the feeling of equilibrium.

Some of the big banks already have declared they are heartened by some recent economic trends and are proclaiming the imminent return to less inflationary times. Interest rates may rise, they say, but not ominously.

But going against the mood, in a manner far from fully understood, is the housing market.

In May, for the first time in four months, the level of mortgage rates on new homes rose, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported. The rise was small, to 8.96 per cent from 8.94 per cent in April, but the direction's the thing.

Sales of new homes have been strong, but existing home sales are booming, and so are prices. The median price of an existing single-family home rose $1,000 in April to $42,000.

But the national median price tells only part of the story. In the West, for example, the median price rose $3,800 in April, reaching $57,200. And if the survey were limited to California, the increase would have been even higher.

In that state houses are purchased for resale. The home buyer, in effect, has put himself in the position of a middleman, acquiring properties not to live in but to sell for immediate profit.

The question that cannot be answered is whether the phenomenon is regional or national. So far the California type of speculation has been rare in other areas of the country, but you must remember that many fevers as well as sound ideas have spread eastward from the coast.

At any rate, the existing home market is soaring. In April alone some 310,000 resale transactions took place, representing a total market value of more than $14 billion, according to the National Association of Realtors.

The April sales performance translates into a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.3 million units, which the Realtors say is a "healthy 17.4 per cent above the level of a year ago."

More than one-third of all resale homes now are priced above $50,000, in contrast to just over 10 per cent four years ago. With prices rising steadily, the speculative appeal is obvious.

Workshops to offer music and metrics

CAPE GIRARDEAU— Short-term workshops in choral music and the metric system are scheduled next week on the Southeast Missouri State University campus.

The workshop in choral music will run, subject to sufficient enrollment, June 23-25 and may be taken for one semester hour of either graduate or undergraduate credit. It is scheduled to be in session from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. on the first two days and from 9 a.m. to noon on the final day.

Fee for the workshop will be $25. Students who wish room and board during the period will pay an additional $50.

Two credit hours of either graduate or undergraduate credit will be allowed for the workshop in the metric system, which is designed for elementary teachers. It will meet daily from 1 to 5 p.m. June 20 through Junly 1. Fee is $40.

Participants will consider the history and reasons for using the metric system, relationships between the English system of measure and the metric system, and techniques of measure and calculations in the metric system.

This workshop has materialized but additional students may enroll.

More information about either workshop may be obtained by contacting the Office of Continuing Education at Southeast Missouri State. The telephone number is 314-334-8211, Ext. 254.

Americans spending heavily on luxuries

NEW YORK (AP) — Tremors in the consumer confidence indices notwithstanding, a lot of money is being spent by Americans in this first half of 1977, on houses, cars, food and luxuries, among other things.

If current rates continue, more houses — new and resale — will be acquired this year than in any year in history. Car sales are booming. Food sales — well, good times or bad, families do their best not to cut back on nutrition.

And luxuries? Note that Tiffany & Co. reported the best first-quarter in its 141-year history, aided by its ability to display a $100,000 ring in less space than it takes another retailer to show a $2 ashtray.

But the rich are different, it has been said, and this comment might be especially true today. Consumer analysts continue to note that much of the buying these days is a by an affluent one-third of the population.

The other two-thirds, it is alleged, are hurting. They are pressed merely to pay their bills; they cannot consider committing money to a better future; they are too busy trying to make do today.

Yes, but they are spending too. Consumer installment credit outstanding now totals a record $182.26 billion, 12.3 per cent higher than a year ago (deduct 5 or 6 per cent for inflation). New credit obligations are being assumed at a record or near-record pace.

Cotton allotment bill to be introduced

MEMPHIS— A bill updating procedure for determining upland cotton allotments will be introduced in the House of Representatives this week.

The National Cotton Council has been advised by Rep. David R. Bowen (D-Miss.), chairman of the House Agriculture Subcommittee on Cotton and author of the bill, that a subcommittee hearing on the proposal has been scheduled for 10 a.m., June 28.

The bill incorporates recommendations developed by the National Cotton Council's Producer Steering Committee and authorized by Council delegates in a mail ballot.

The House Agriculture Committee had updated allotment systems for wheat and feed grains when it reported the farm bill in mid-May. However, at Bowen's suggestion, it deferred action on on cotton allotments pending completion of the producer study. The Senate-passed farm bill includes an amended Administration proposal for all crop allotments.

The Producer Steering Committee proposal for cotton follows the House and Senate bill concept for wheat and feed grains by basing "farm allotment" on acreage the farmer decides to plant. Under this concept, government payments would be made to farmers only when the average price they receive during the calendar year is less than the established "target price."

Under the proposal:

(1) The national program acreage for cotton would be announced no later than Dec. 15 for the next year's crop.

(2) If payments are to be made, the allocation factor (not to exceed 100 percent) would be obtained by dividing the national program acreage by the estimated harvested acreage.

(3) To obtain the acreage on which payment may be made, the allocation factor would be applied to cotton acreage planted on the farm. However, the factor would not be applied to any farm where acreage as voluntarily reduced from the previous year by as much as the recommended percentage. These exemptions would be taken into account by the Secretary of Agriculture in setting the allocation factor.

(4) Program payment yields would be established each year on the basis of a farm's actual yields per harvested acre for the preceding three years. Adjustments would be made for abnormal weather and conditions, with appraisals where yield data are not available.

(5) The Secretary would be empowered to require producers to set aside a prescribed acreage of cropland on their farms (not to exceed 28 percent of the current cotton acreage). He could also permit planting and other use of set-aside acreage under certain conditions.

(6) Should additional allotment adjustments become necessary, the Secretary would be authorized to limit cotton acreage planted on farms by applying a factor to the highest acreage planted--including prevented planting--on the farm in the preceding five years. Penalty for farms not complying would be ineligibility for loans and payments.

As in the Senate bill, producers would be eligible for payments if plantings are prevented. In the case of low yields due to disasters, payments may be made on the farm's entire planted acreage.

Persons wishing to testify at the June 28 hearing on the proposed Bowen bill should contact the clerk of the House Agriculture Committee.

Missouri tourism sets new records

JEFFERSON CITY— As Missouri's 1977 vacation season gets under way, the state's Division of Tourism has released a study which shows 1976 was another record year for Missouri's travel industry. According to the study, travel spending reached $2.25 billion in Missouri in 1976, compared with $1.95 billion in 1975. The study shows travel spending generated $174 million in state tax revenues last year–an increase of $19 million over 1975.

The statistics come from a research project conducted by Dr. Lewis C. Copeland of Knoxville, Tenn. The Missouri Division of Tourism commissioned the study, which focused on Missouri tourism in 1976. Dr. Copeland has specialized in state and small area tourism studies for 30 years.

According to Dr. Copeland, travel spending has increased at an average annual rate of 9.8 per cent in Missouri since 1963, while all other retail business was rising at an average annual rate of only 8.3 per cent. In terms of dollars, this means travel spending in Missouri amounted to $625 million in 1963 and $2.25 billion in 1976--a 13year increase of 260 per cent.

Dr. Copeland also notes that the travel business is vital to Missouri's state and local government. The $174 million in state taxes generated by travel spending last year was 7.9 per cent of Missouri's total state revenue from all sources. Local taxes of $43 million and federal taxes of $98 million also were generated by travel spending in Missouri last year.

Dr. Copeland's study confirms that tourism is one of Missouri's three largest industries. On the average day, he says, Missouri tourists comprise nine per cent of the state's population. Brought together in one place, they would form a city of of 450,000 people. And spending by travelers last year accounted for 11 per cent of Missouri's retail business.

The core of the travel business, says Dr. Copeland, is the 26,220 businesses which catered to Missouri's estimated 30.5 million travelers in 1976. Thirty per cent of the workers in Missouri's retail business are catering to the traveling public or owe their jobs to travel-related business.

According to the study, business firms with a direct interest in trading with travelers provided jobs for 215,600 persons last year. These firms paid out $1.7 billion for payrolls and other personal incomes. Of course, only a part of these payments can be traced to travelers, but trading with travelers creates business and business creates income.

According to James L. Pasley, Missouri's tourism director, this recent study confirms that tourism is vital to Missouri's economy. "Dr. Copeland is a recognized authority in the field of tourism research," says Pasley. "His study shows that tourism is a healthy, growing--and important--indistry in Missouri."

The number of suicides in Great Britain declined 50 per cent during 1969-70.

Cotton allotment bill to be introduced

MEMPHIS— A bill updating procedure for determining upland cotton allotments will be introduced in the House of Representatives this week.

The National Cotton Council has been advised by Rep. David R. Bowen (D-Miss.), chairman of the House Agriculture Subcommittee on Cotton and author of the bill, that a subcommittee hearing on the proposal has been scheduled for 10 a.m., June 28.

The bill incorporates recommendations developed by the National Cotton Council's Producer Steering Committee and authorized by Council delegates in a mail ballot.

The House Agriculture Committee had updated allotment systems for wheat and feed grains when it reported the farm bill in mid-May. However, at Bowen's suggestion, it deferred action on on cotton allotments pending completion of the producer study. The Senate-passed farm bill includes an amended Administration proposal for all crop allotments.

The Producer Steering Committee proposal for cotton follows the House and Senate bill concept for wheat and feed grains by basing "farm allotment" on acreage the farmer decides to plant. Under this concept, government payments would be made to farmers only when the average price they receive during the calendar year is less than the established "target price."

Under the proposal:

(1) The national program acreage for cotton would be announced no later than Dec. 15 for the next year's crop.

(2) If payments are to be made, the allocation factor (not to exceed 100 percent) would be obtained by dividing the national program acreage by the estimated harvested acreage.

(3) To obtain the acreage on which payment may be made, the allocation factor would be applied to cotton acreage planted on the farm. However, the factor would not be applied to any farm where acreage as voluntarily reduced from the previous year by as much as the recommended percentage. These exemptions would be taken into account by the Secretary of Agriculture in setting the allocation factor.

(4) Program payment yields would be established each year on the basis of a farm's actual yields per harvested acre for the preceding three years. Adjustments would be made for abnormal weather and conditions, with appraisals where yield data are not available.

(5) The Secretary would be empowered to require producers to set aside a prescribed acreage of cropland on their farms (not to exceed 28 percent of the current cotton acreage). He could also permit planting and other use of set-aside acreage under certain conditions.

(6) Should additional allotment adjustments become necessary, the Secretary would be authorized to limit cotton acreage planted on farms by applying a factor to the highest acreage planted--including prevented planting--on the farm in the preceding five years. Penalty for farms not complying would be ineligibility for loans and payments.

As in the Senate bill, producers would be eligible for payments if plantings are prevented. In the case of low yields due to disasters, payments may be made on the farm's entire planted acreage.

Persons wishing to testify at the June 28 hearing on the proposed Bowen bill should contact the clerk of the House Agriculture Committee.

Missouri tourism sets new records

JEFFERSON CITY— As Missouri's 1977 vacation season gets under way, the state's Division of Tourism has released a study which shows 1976 was another record year for Missouri's travel industry. According to the study, travel spending reached $2.25 billion in Missouri in 1976, compared with $1.95 billion in 1975. The study shows travel spending generated $174 million in state tax revenues last year–an increase of $19 million over 1975.

The statistics come from a research project conducted by Dr. Lewis C. Copeland of Knoxville, Tenn. The Missouri Division of Tourism commissioned the study, which focused on Missouri tourism in 1976. Dr. Copeland has specialized in state and small area tourism studies for 30 years.

According to Dr. Copeland, travel spending has increased at an average annual rate of 9.8 per cent in Missouri since 1963, while all other retail business was rising at an average annual rate of only 8.3 per cent. In terms of dollars, this means travel spending in Missouri amounted to $625 million in 1963 and $2.25 billion in 1976--a 13year increase of 260 per cent.

Dr. Copeland also notes that the travel business is vital to Missouri's state and local government. The $174 million in state taxes generated by travel spending last year was 7.9 per cent of Missouri's total state revenue from all sources. Local taxes of $43 million and federal taxes of $98 million also were generated by travel spending in Missouri last year.

Dr. Copeland's study confirms that tourism is one of Missouri's three largest industries. On the average day, he says, Missouri tourists comprise nine per cent of the state's population. Brought together in one place, they would form a city of of 450,000 people. And spending by travelers last year accounted for 11 per cent of Missouri's retail business.

The core of the travel business, says Dr. Copeland, is the 26,220 businesses which catered to Missouri's estimated 30.5 million travelers in 1976. Thirty per cent of the workers in Missouri's retail business are catering to the traveling public or owe their jobs to travel-related business.

According to the study, business firms with a direct interest in trading with travelers provided jobs for 215,600 persons last year. These firms paid out $1.7 billion for payrolls and other personal incomes. Of course, only a part of these payments can be traced to travelers, but trading with travelers creates business and business creates income.

According to James L. Pasley, Missouri's tourism director, this recent study confirms that tourism is vital to Missouri's economy. "Dr. Copeland is a recognized authority in the field of tourism research," says Pasley. "His study shows that tourism is a healthy, growing--and important–indistry in Missouri."

The number of suicides in Great Britain declined 50 per cent during 1969-70.

SMSU to offer Saturday courses

CAPE GIRARDEAU— The College of Business at Southeast Missouri State University will offer eight courses on Saturdays during the fall semester, Dean Gene Loftis announced today.

The Saturday program will be a first for the College of Business, Dr. Loftis said, and it will also mark the first time in a number of years that any Saturday classes have been offered at the university.

Each of the classes which the College of Business will offer on Saturday is a three-credit-hour undergraduate course. Four of the courses will be in session each Saturday, beginning Aug. 27 and continuing through Dec. 10, from 9 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. und four of them will be in session from 1:15 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Thus, it is possible, Dr. Loftis pointed out, for a student to make up to six credit hours by enrolling for a Saturday only schedule.

Courses to be taught on Saturday morning will be Elementary Accounting I, Computer Science Fundamentals, Perosnnel Management, and Marketing. Saturday afternoon offerings will be Electronic Business Information Processing, Business Correspondence and Reports, Fundamentals of Management, and Advertising.

Eight other courses are tentatively scheduled to be offered during the spring semester on Saturday's, Dr. Loftis said.

"The Saturday program will enable people active in business to combine their studies with their careers with maximum attention to both," Dr. Loftis said.

Among the objectives of the program, according to Dr. Loftis, are providing basic business knowledges and skills and providing refresher courses for managers.

Prospects good for early cotton crop

JOE H. SCOTT
State Agronomy Specialist

PORTAGEVILLE— We have a good chance of an early cotton harvest this year. Cotton began squaring the last of May and we should be finding white blooms this week.

Dry weather the past week has enabled growers to keep their crop clean. However, some suffered sand injury from strong winds.

We should try to protect the fruit that the cotton is setting and avoid delaying the crop in any way. The use of DSMA or MSMA should stop when cotton starts to bloom. Also fields should be scouted often for insects so as to avoid loss of squares, blooms and young bolls.

Wheat harvest was in full swing last week. Yields were better than expected on most farms but the good yields didn't make up for the low price. Growers have their fields ready for soybeans or have planted. A rain was needed after harvest to get a stand of beans. Rain was also needed for corn and grain sorghum. An irrigation system is a must for corn growers. Many were irrigating their corn this past week.

Corn is in the stage where 2,4-D shouldn't be applied. Don't apply 2,4-D to terminal growth of corn, especially from from beginning of tasseling to dough filling stage. Also do not treat grain sorghum with 2,4-D while in bloom. Also, be especially cautious and not spray 2,4-D near cotton and soybean fields.

We get questions every year on how late we can plant soybeans. Our latest planting date that our soybean researchers have in their date of planting studies at the Delta Center is July 5th. July 5th planting dates average about 5 to 6 bushels lower in yields than June 15 planting dates.

Control cocklebur in soybeans early

Thomas A. Brown, Jr.
Area Agronomy Specialist

Controlling cocklebur in soybeans during the first month of the life of the bean crop is the key to minimizing soybean yield losses caused by this weed pest. In addition the cocklebur is much easier to control at this early stage.

According to results of research conducted in Arkansas in which cocklebur infestations up to three cocklebur plants per foot of row were involved, no yield loss was suffered where cocklebur was controlled within four weeks after beans came up and increased rapidly until beans were 12 weeks old, reaching maximum yield losses at this stage. Approximately 50 percent of the yield reduction had occurred by the time the beans began blooming at eight to ten weeks of age.

If we consider these results in comparison with weed control practices used in soybeans, it seems to tell us something about why cocklebur is such a problem in bean fields in this area. Cocklebur in soybean fields are not gfenerally controlled during the first four weeks of the life of the bean crop in this area. In many cases, cockleburs are not controlled until the weeds get larger than the beans after maximum yield loss has been suffered. If controlled before this late stage, it is often after considerable yield reduction has been suffered by the soybean crop. Very often, bean yields are further reduced by herbicide damage to the crop when cocklebur control is attempted during the later stages.

How can cocklebur control be accomplished during the first month of the life of the soybean crop? A combination of control practices will be necessary and methods used should vary with the conditions involved.

Metribuzin (Sencor or Lexone) is the most effrective herbicide recommended as a preemergence treatment for cocklebur control. Sencor can be used alone or in combination with other herbicides including Trifluralin (Treflan) or Alachlor (Lasso) for the control of a wider variety of weeks. It can generally be successfully used on all but sandy or light sandy loam soils. Although Metribuxin is a comparatively good cocklebur control herbicide, it will not control 100 per cent of the cockleburs by any means.seeded cocklebur seed can be expected to germinate and come up at a later date even in cases where this herbicide is properly used and weather conditions are favorable for good control.

Dinoseb (Dinitro) can be used as an early postemergence ("cracking stage") treatment to control a flush of weeds, including cockleburs, that comes up with the soybeans. It should be applied when soybean plants are in the cotyledon (seed leaf) stage but before the first true leaves open to expose the terminal bud of the soybean plant. Dinoseb is a contact killer; therefore, it will only control those weeds that are up at the time of application.

Bentazon (Basagran), applied as a tropical (over-the-top) treatment, is effective in controlling cocklebur and other annual broadleaf weeds. Cockleburs can be controlled by the use of considerably less chemical if applied when the weeds are small and easy to kill. Thorough coverage of the entire weed is absolutely essential for good control.

FUNNY BUSINESS

By Roger Bollen

"Let them eat grass"

By Joseph J. Marks
University of Missouri
ScienceNews Director

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Cow eats what man can't.

Man drinks milk and-or eats beef.

And there you have a basic food formula for tight energy situations.

The key isforages – especially grass-legume pastures, claims A. G. (Jerry) Mathces, USDA Agricultural Research Service agronomist at the University of Missouri-Coumbia.

"As a feed source, pasture production is 15 to 100 times more efficient than corn grain production in terms of fossil energy requirements," he said.

The fossil energy input includes fuel for planting, tillage and harvest, plus the natural gas from which nitrogen fertilizer is made. The grass-legume pasture has a big advantage as an energy saver because the cow does the harvesting, and the legumes produce their own nitrogen.

"In fac, research shows growing cattle can easily gain one-quarter pound or more daily with a grass-legume mixture than they can be grazing pure fescues fertilized with nitrogen," said Mathces.

Many farmers, he believes, could probably increase forage production by 50 per cent -- maybe even double it – if they took full advantage of all the forage technology available today.

"This technology includes such things as growing the right varieties, putting on the right amount of fertilizer and managing pastures so cattle waste as little as possible," said Matches.

That "waste-not" philosophy is also a big concern to Fred Martz, UMC dairy scientist.

"We not only want to be able to produce more forage per acre," he says, "but we want animals to eat more of it, too.

"In other words, we want a fast disappearing hay for cows. We want forages that a cow as quickly as possible.

"The more a cow eats, the better it could produce milk or meat. A cow can't eat much if a forage sets too long in her rumen (that compartment of her stomach where digestion takes place).

"Also, the better a forage digests, the more efficient it is as an energy source for the animal."

Martz and his students are developing a mathematical equation that takes all these things into account. And with it, they hope to predict how much forage an animal will eat and how good it is for producing milk and beef.

"It's usueful to the plant breeder who is striving to develop 'ideal' forages," said Martz. "It would also help the farmer improve the efficiency of his ration by showing him how forages fit into the diet and how much grain is needed."

Martz, Matches and up to 25 other University of Missouri - Columbia scientists, extension specialists and students meet each Tuesday for a "brown bag seminar" to discuss ways to improve forage- livestock production efficiency. With the exception of summer breaks, they have been holding these meetings every week for the last seven years.

"Most of the discussion sessions are pretty informal and spontaneous," says Matches, who organized the forage-livestock sack lunch discussion group.

Many of the discussions have dealt with tall fescue, a grass that covers about 4 million acres of Missouri.

"We're concerned about improving this grass, because it's so critical to our agriculture," says Matches. "Missouri ranks second in the nation in beef-cow numbers,and our cow-calf operations in many parts of the state depend on tall fescue."

UMC's tall fescue research is really beginning to pay off. Last year, the University of Kentucky and USDA released Kenhy, a new fescue that Martz and colleagues at UMC's Southwest Center at Mt. Vernon had proved to be superior than Kentucky-31 in terms of animal performance.

And now, the Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station is testing I-96, a Missouri tall fescue especially adapted to this state's growing conditions which also ranks with Kenhy in terms of superior animal performance.

I-96 was originally selected and bred by Kay Asay, formerly of UMC and now with the U.S. Department of Agriculture at Utah State University. His research is being continued in Missouri by David Sleper, who's optimistic that several new and improve fescue varieties will be available to Missouri farmers in the next five years. In fact, Sleper will plant four new tall fescue selections this year for grazing trials next fall.

Sleper agrees with Matches and Martz that forages can be improved a great deal. He notes that differences in digestibility among different strains of tall fescue ranges from 15 to 30 per cent. And, of course, the more highly digestible ones produce higher daily gains in cattle.

Another UMC agronomist, C. J. (Jerry) Nelson, believes the "breakthrough" in fescue yields will come when scientists develop grasses that make the most efficient use of photosyntheses.

He says future fescues will have leaves that "shoot up faster" than those being grown today. They'll intercept more sunlight to take better advantage of this energy source, and hopefully will be more digestible to animals.

UMC scientists would also like to produce fescues that don't cause fescue foot disease or grass tetany. Both cripple cattle and sometimes kill them.

George B. Garner, UMC biochemist is rapidly working toward identifying fescue foot toxin. Once identified, he can start working on an antitoxin.

In the meantime, he urges cattlemen to practice good management to prevent disease. In the case of pastures, he said, they should use a mixture of escue and legumes because that "gives less trouble than pure tall fescue stands." Rotational grazing using fescue and other grass is helpful, too.

In the case of grass tetany, Sleper is hopeful that he can genetically select for plants that will not cause the disease. But this could take awhile. In the meantime, he advises cattlemen to be sure their animals get supplemental magnesium in their rations. Chances for the disease are greatest when the magnesium level gets low in relationship to calsium and potassium.

Altogether, UMC has scientists in five different disciplines working on some phase of forage and animal production efficiency, said Mathces, "because we see the forage-livestock combination as a low energy way to produce food.

"We have millions of acres in this country which could produce good forage, but not much else. If we made full use of that production capability and put it through ruminant animals which can convert forage into meat and milk, we'll have quite an efficient food production system."

Save the syrup of canned fruits in a plastic container and keep it in the freezer until you have enough. Thicken it with a little cornstarch and use it as a hot sauce over snow pudding, pound cake, French toast, or pancakes.

Turn plowed ground into finished seedbeds

International 315 Packer-Mulcher

Makes plowed fields into firm, finished seedbeds in one trip over. Helps you take full advantage of critical spring working days, and get better seedbeds as well. Crushes both surface and buried clods. Sizes from 12¼ to 15 feet non-folding, 20½ and 25½-foot wing-type folding.
- Spring-loaded self-leveling hitch assures even work in rough terrain.
- Carrying wheels inside frame ease travel through narrow gates.
- Massive channel steel frame stands up to rigor of rough work.
- Big 17-inch notched packer wheels offer extra weight for complete crushing action; "crow feet" type wheels optional.
- Regreasable triple-sealed gang axle bearings extend service life.
- Spring-tooth penetration controlled on the go hydraulically.

Prospects good for early cotton crop

JOE H. SCOTT
State Agronomy Specialist

PORTAGEVILLE— We have a good chance of an early cotton harvest this year. Cotton began squaring the last of May and we should be finding white blooms this week.

Dry weather the past week has enabled growers to keep their crop clean. However, some suffered sand injury from strong winds.

We should try to protect the fruit that the cotton is setting and avoid delaying the crop in any way. The use of DSMA or MSMA should stop when cotton starts to bloom. Also fields should be scouted often for insects so as to avoid loss of squares, blooms and young bolls.

Wheat harvest was in full swing last week. Yields were better than expected on most farms but the good yields didn't make up for the low price. Growers have their fields ready for soybeans or have planted. A rain was needed after harvest to get a stand of beans. Rain was also needed for corn and grain sorghum. An irrigation system is a must for corn growers. Many were irrigating their corn this past week.

Corn is in the stage where 2,4-D shouldn't be applied. Don't apply 2,4-D to terminal growth of corn, especially from from beginning of tasseling to dough filling stage. Also do not treat grain sorghum with 2,4-D while in bloom. Also, be especially cautious and not spray 2,4-D near cotton and soybean fields.

We get questions every year on how late we can plant soybeans. Our latest planting date that our soybean researchers have in their date of planting studies at the Delta Center is July 5th. July 5th planting dates average about 5 to 6 bushels lower in yields than June 15 planting dates.

Control cocklebur in soybeans early

Thomas A. Brown, Jr.
Area Agronomy Specialist

Controlling cocklebur in soybeans during the first month of the life of the bean crop is the key to minimizing soybean yield losses caused by this weed pest. In addition the cocklebur is much easier to control at this early stage.

According to results of research conducted in Arkansas in which cocklebur infestations up to three cocklebur plants per foot of row were involved, no yield loss was suffered where cocklebur was controlled within four weeks after beans came up and increased rapidly until beans were 12 weeks old, reaching maximum yield losses at this stage. Approximately 50 percent of the yield reduction had occurred by the time the beans began blooming at eight to ten weeks of age.

If we consider these results in comparison with weed control practices used in soybeans, it seems to tell us something about why cocklebur is such a problem in bean fields in this area. Cocklebur in soybean fields are not gfenerally controlled during the first four weeks of the life of the bean crop in this area. In many cases, cocklebur are not controlled until the weeds get larger than the beans after maximum yield loss has been suffered. If controlled before this late stage, it is often after considerable yield reduction has been suffered by the soybean crop. Very often, bean yields are further reduced by herbicide damage to the crop when cocklebur control is attempted during the later stages.

How can cocklebur control be accomplished during the first month of the life of the soybean crop? A combination of control practices will be necessary and methods used should vary with the conditions involved.

Metribuzin (Sencor or Lexone) is the most effrective herbicide recommended as a preemergence treatment for cocklebur control. Sencor can be used alone or in combination with other herbicides including Trifluralin (Treflan) or Alachlor (Lasso) for the control of a wider variety of weeks. It can generally be successfully used on all but sandy or light sandy loam soils. Although Metribuxin is a comparatively good cocklebur control herbicide, it will not control 100 per cent of the cocklebus by any means.seeded cocklebur seed can be expected to germinate and come up at a later date even in cases where this herbicide is properly used and weather conditions are favorable for good control.

Dinoseb (Dinitro) can be used as an early postemergence ("cracking stage") treatment to control a flush of weeds, including cockleburs, that comes up with the soybeans. It should be applied when soybean plants are in the cotyledon (seed leaf) stage but before the first true leaves open to expose the terminal bud of the soybean plant. Dinoseb is a contact killer; therefore, it will only control those weeds that are up at the time of application.

Bentazon (Basagran), applied as a tropical (over-the-top) treatment, is effective in controlling cocklebur and other annual broadleaf weeds. Cockleburs can be controlled by the use of considerably less chemical if applied when the weeds are small and easy to kill. Thorough coverage of the entire weed is absolutely essential for good control.

FUNNY BUSINESS

"Let them eat grass"

By Joseph J. Marks
University of Missouri
ScienceNews Director

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Cow eats what man can't.

Man drinks milk and-or eats beef.

And there you have a basic food formula for tight energy situations.

The key isforages – especially grass-legume pastures, claims A. G. (Jerry) Mathces, USDA Agricultural Research Service agronomist at the University of Missouri-Coumbia.

"As a feed source, pasture production is 15 to 100 times more efficient than corn grain production in terms of fossil energy requirements," he said.

The fossil energy input includes fuel for planting, tillage and harvest, plus the natural gas from which nitrogen fertilizer is made. The grass-legume pasture has a big advantage as an energy saver because the cow does the harvesting, and the legumes produce their own nitrogen.

"In fac, research shows growing cattle can easily gain one-quarter pound or more daily with a grass-legume mixture than they can be grazing pure fescues fertilized with nitrogen," said Mathces.

Many farmers, he believes, could probably increase forage production by 50 per cent -- maybe even double it – if they took full advantage of all the forage technology available today.

"This echnology includes such things as growing the right varieties, putting on the right amount of fertilizer and managing pastures so cattle waste as little as possible," said Matches.

That "waste-not" philosophy is also a big concern to Fred Martz, UMC dairy scientist.

"We not only want to be able to produce more forage per acre," he says, "but we want animals to eat more of it, too.

"In other words, we want a fast disappearing hay for cows. We want forages that a cow as quickly as possible.

"The more a cow eats, the better it could produce milk or meat. A cow can't eat much if a forage sets too long in her rumen (that compartment of her stomach where digestion takes place).

"Also, the better a forage digests, the more efficient it is as an energy source for the animal."

Martz and his students are developing a mathematical equation that takes all these things into account. And with it, they hope to predict how much forage an animal will eat and how good it is for producing milk and beef.

"It's usueful to the plant breeder who is striving to develop 'ideal' forages," said Martz. "It would also help the farmer improve the efficiency of his ration by showing him how forages fit into the diet and how much grain is needed."

Martz, Matches and up to 25 other University of Missouri - Columbia scientists, extension specialists and students meet each Tuesday for a "brown bag seminar" to discuss ways to improve forage- livestock production efficiency. With the exception of summer breaks, they have been holding these meetings every week for the last seven years.

"Most of the discussion sessions are pretty informal and spontaneous," says Matches, who organized the forage-livestock sack lunch discussion group.

Many of the discussions have dealt with tall fescue, a grass that covers about 4 million acres of Missouri.

"We're concerned about improving this grass, because it's so critical to our agriculture," says Matches. "Missouri ranks second in the nation in beef-cow numbers,and our cow-calf operations in many parts of the state depend on tall fescue."

UMC's tall fescue research is really beginning to pay off. Last year, the University of Kentucky and USDA released Kenhy, a new fescue that Martz and colleagues at UMC's Southwest Center at Mt. Vernon had proved to be superior than Kentucky-31 in terms of animal performance.

And now, the Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station is testing I-96, a Missouri tall fescue especially adapted to this state's growing conditions which also ranks with Kenhy in terms of superior animal performance.

I-96 was originally selected and bred by Kay Asay, formerly of UMC and now with the U.S. Department of Agriculture at Utah State University. His research is being continued in Missouri by David Sleper, who's optimistic that several new and improve fescue varieties will be available to Missouri farmers in the next five years. In fact, Sleper will plant four new tall fescue selections this year for grazing trials next fall.

Sleper agrees with Matches and Martz that forages can be improved a great deal. He notes that differences in digestibility among different strains of tall fescue ranges from 15 to 30 per cent. And, of course, the more highly digestible ones produce higher daily gains in cattle.

Another UMC agronomist, C. J. (Jerry) Nelson, believes the "breakthrough" in fescue yields will come when scientists develop grasses that make the most efficient use of photosyntheses.

He says future fescues will have leaves that "shoot up faster" than those being grown today. They'll intercept more sunlight to take better advantage of this energy source, and hopefully will be more digestible to animals.

UMC scientists would also like to produce fescues that don't cause fescue foot disease or grass tetany. Both cripple cattle and sometimes kill them.

George B. Garner, UMC biochemist is rapidly working toward identifying fescue foot toxin. Once identified, he can start working on an antitoxin.

In the meantime, he urges cattlemen to practice good management to prevent disease. In the case of pastures, he said, they should use a mixture of escue and legumes because that "gives less trouble than pure tall fescue stands." Rotational grazing using fescue and other grass is helpful, too.

In the case of grass tetany, Sleper is hopeful that he can genetically select for plants that will not cause the disease. But this could take awhile. In the meantime, he advises cattlemen to be sure their animals get supplemental magnesium in their rations. Chances for the disease are greatest when the magnesium level gets low in relationship to calsium and potassium.

Altogether, UMC has scientists in five different disciplines working on some phase of forage and animal production efficiency, said Mathces, "because we see the forage-livestock combination as a low energy way to produce food.

"We have millions of acres in this country which could produce good forage, but not much else. If we made full use of that production capability and put it through ruminant animals which can convert forage into meat and milk, we'll have quite an efficient food production system."

Save the syrup of canned fruits in a plastic container and keep it in the freezer until you have enough. Thicken it with a little cornstarch and use it as a hot sauce over snow pudding, pound cake, French toast, or pancakes.

Farmer's liveilood tied to energy

Associated Press Writer

Long before it was in vogue to be energy-conscious, the American farmer claimed fuel conservation was as basic to farm life as the tractor and plow.

"Farm people have been promoting fuel conservation for years because fuel is one of the biggest costs of farming," said Richard Basore, a central Kansas farmer. "We can't pass our costs along because we well on an open market."

Indeed, the farmer's very livelihood is tied to energy. Diesel fuel powers the tractors and combines that work his land; gasoline fuels the family car for trips into town and natural gas is essential for the fertilizer and irrigation systems that nurture his crops.

It is clear to many farm experts who have studied President Carter's national energy proposals, however, that merely being energy-conscious will not be enough. Such alternatives as coal and solar energy must be developed soon, they said in interviews, if farm production costs are to be kept from spiraling upward with conventional fuel prices.

Dr. T. Roy Bogle, an extension economist at Kansas State University, contends farmers first must develop alternative fuels to natural gas, used heavily for irrigation, fertilizer production and grain drying but which under the Carter package would be allowed to rise in price beginning next year.

Until that happens, however, farmers have two choices: cut back their energy use-perhaps by working fewer acres of land-or be willing to pay the higher prices.

The farmers' dependence on machinery and automobile transportation is reflected in Agriculture Department statistics breaking down energy use. Field machinery consumes the greatest amount, 30 per cent, while transportation requires 25 per cent.

On-farm use of fuel traditionally has been excempt from federal taxes and that policy is expected to continue. But the bsic cost of diesel fuel is forecast to rise. And just like city residents, the farmer would be pinched heavily by Carter's proposed gasoline tax.

Carter indicated in his proposal to Congress that he would exempt crop dryers and fertilizer manufacturers from a proposed tax on large natural gas users. Of natural gas used in agriculture, these areas—plus irrigation—require most of the fuel.

But Rep. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, cautions farmers not to be "lulled into continued reliance on natural gas" as a result.

"Farmers should remember two things," he said. "First, the price of natural gas is going up, way up. Secondly, we're eventually going to be facing very limited supplies, if we don't run out altogether. Farmers must look for alternatives."

Carter asked Congress to allow the price of newly discovered natural gas to rise to $1.75 per thousand cubic feet at the well, while present reserves-estimated at the nine-year supply—would remain at the regulated price.

The Federal Power Commission's wellhead prices for interstate gas range from 26 cents per thousand cubic feet for the oldest gas to $1.42 per thousand cubic feet for the newest gas. The average price is estimated at 75 cents.

American agriculture used 176 billion cubic feet of natural gas for 1976 production, a sizable portion of which went for irrigation, and more than 80 per cent of the nation's irrigated farmland is in 17 western states.

"The blended price of reserve and new gas will be phased over a nine-year period which certainly eases the impact on irrigation farming," said Frank Trotman, executive secretary of the Southwest Kansas Irrigation Association. "With the depressed prices for our crops, we just could not stand a drastic overnight increase."

Providing an alternative power source to irrigation — electricity, coal or solar energy—will take years, Trotman said, so farmers either will have to reduce irrigatin or absorb the increased expense.

Farmers also may have to prepare to absorb eventual increases in fertilizer production costs as a result of the graduated rise in natural gas prices, said Raymond Early, vice president fertilizer for Farmland Industries of Kansas City.

"I would say if the farmer doesn't see improvement in the prices he receives (for crops), he's going to have to take a definite look at his fertility programs," Early said. "He might find he can reduce one year and have little effect."

New means of deriving nitrogen fertilizers from a source other than natural gas such as coal, are being explored, he said. Nitrogen combined with hydrogen provided by a hydrocarbon from natural gas produces anhydrous ammonia, the basis of nitrogen fertilizers.

"We may eventually be able to convert plans to coal gasification," said Donald Collins of the Fertilizer Institute in Washington. "But in the foreseeable future, it will be unlikely we'll switch totally from natural gas in ammonia production."

Solar energy may be one of the most promising alternatives to the use of natural gas by farmers.

The U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration plans to begin tests in Arizona by 1979 in which solar power would be used to pump irrigation water from deep wells.

And the Batelle Memorial Institute, an internationally known scientific research organization based in Columbus, Ohio, recently installed what it bills as the world's largest solar-powered irrigation system near Phoenix, Ariz.

"Solar energy is an inflation-proof device, " said Peter Hofmann, associate director of the program. "No one can jack up the energy costs and that's what makes it attractive in the energy economy we live in."

But Hofmann cautioned that the cost of building such a system, which operates a 50-horsepower motor to draw water from the ground, would be about $200,000. He said the cost could be cut by a third or a fourth when mass production of solar irrigation systems is accomplished.

"Assuming certain rises in conventional energy costs, and assuming a decline in the cost of solar equipment, we think in four to five years such solar installation would be competitive with conventional systems," he said.

The initial cost to install a solar system probably always would be greater than putting in a conventional system, the scientist said, but its operating cost over the life of the systems would be less.

Additionally, Hofmann said, "irrigation only takes place in certain parts of the year, so you could use your system for grain drying, heating of liveeock shelters, even farm residences."

It is too late to bring Old Dobbin out of retirement and scrap the tractors and other farm machinery that will consume an estimated 6.5 billion gallons of gasoline and diesel fuel in 1977 production.

In fact, while Americans are being urged to drive smaller, more economical cars, aarmers are buying larger, more powerful tractors. But there's a good reason.

"Farmers look at the amount of fuel used per acre, not per mipe," said Rich Stoy of J. I. Case Manufacturng Co. "If they try to run two, three, four smaller horsepower tractors, their costs will be larger than using one big tractor. So with a big tractor you're going to be saving."

Bob Parrett, district manager in Kearney, Neb., for Steiger Tractor Inc., said a 450-horsepower, four-wheel-drive tractor just introduced by his company has attracted more buyers "than we would ever have believed."

The use of diesel fuel for farm machinery has reduced fuel consumption by an average of 30 per cent over gasoline-powered engines, according to William A. Hewitt, chairman of John Deere Co. of Moline, Ill.

"We are working on more energy-efficient engines using advanced fuel injection, high-ratio turbocharging and extending the art of inter-cooling" to further fuel efficiency, he told a recent meeting of company stockholders.

Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., has introduced a bill in the House to establish government research programs to develop "gasohol," an ethyl alcohol mixture derived from crops.

"The bill would set government programs moving on pilot projects," Glickman said of the mixture he hopes could become an alternative or supplement to diesel fuel and gasoline used on the farm.

"We have the technology to make it, but it hasn't been produced economically and we need to find ways to do that," he said.

Soil laboratory will test plant element levels

By JOHN D. GARRETT
Area Agronomy
Specialist

Testing growing plants is an accurate method of determining levels of major and minor elements present in the plants. The Area Soil Testing Laboratory at Portageville is offering this service to farmers again this year.

Any crop can be sampled. Corn is the first one to sample in our area. Corn planted in April is about ready to be sampled. You should begin sampling when you see the first silks emerging. Follow these steps in order to get a good sample.

(1) When to sample-when silks begin to emerge but before they dry.

(2) Part of plant-take the entire "ear" or "shoot" leaf. Take leaf from top ear if stalk has two ears.

(3) How to sample-remove one leaf per plant from 15 to 20 plants selected at random in the field. Break off leaf at base. Do not include portions of leaf sheath. Be sure hands are clean.

(4) Care and handling of sample-start with a clean bag. A kraft paper bag is ideal for collecting, drying and marking samples. It must be clean. New, unused bags are available at most grocers. The 10 to 12 lbs. sizes are satisfactory for corn.

(5) Carry an open bag-drop the leaves in the open bag as they are removed from plants. Leave them loose to allow for air drying. Do not wad or tie the leaves into a bundle. Heating and molding may occur. Do not use a plastic bag.

(6) Leave the bag open-do not close the bag after the sample has been collected. Take sample immediately to your University Extension Center, Area Soil Testing Laboratory, Portageville, or air dry and then deliver or mail it.

It is also a good idea to take a soil sample from same area as plant sample. The results of both plant and soil will help in making fertilizer recommendations for next year's crop.

Every farmer should take at least one sample from his best corn field and one from his problem field. Tissue testing will tell you if adequate plant nutrients are available for maximum yields. If your plants are deficient in nitrogen or one of the micronutrients, and central pivot irrigation is available, nutrients can be applied to correct the problem. A few farmers in the area have already sampled a field or two. You can get more information about plant testing by contacting your local University Extension Center. Request a copy of MU guide 9131, "Sampling Plant Tissue and Soil for Analysis." Check with your local fertilizer dealer. He will probably have copies of the guide and information sheets for samples.

Farm Roundup

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says consumers will pay more for beef and pork this summer than they did a year ago and the price surge probably will continue moderately next fall.

Higher meat prices have been predicted for months by USDA and other livestock experts. However, they are not predicting that meat prices will skyrocket immediately or that they will soar to record levels.

Much will depend on the weather, and how farmers and ranchers adjust their inventories of cattle, hogs and poultry. As always, grain prices and the size of the harvests will be important factors.

But cattle producers, particularly, have trimmed herds sharply to offset financial losses, and this will mean less beef, the main item in the American meat diet.

Following stable prices in the first half of the year, consumers will face higher retail meat prices during the second half, the Department's Outlook and Situation Board said Monday.

"Smaller beef supplies, improved consumer demand, and higher marketing costs will more than offset continued large pork and broiler supplies," the report said.

The supermarket price of choice-grade beef from grain-fed cattle, which is used as a standard by USDA in comparing prices, is expected to average 3 to 4 per cent higher during the summer quarter than this spring, officials said.

"Hamburger prices could advance more than those for choice beef, if slaughter of cows and forage-fed steers and heifers declines this summer as expected," a report said. "Further moderate retail price increases for choice beef and hamburger are expected this fall."

The main sources of hamburger are cows and other cattle which are not "finished" for the slaughter-market in feedlots. If farmers and ranchers send fewer of those animals to market there will be less hamburger and prices will go up.

But producers have sharply boosted the supply of pork and broiler chickens the past year, meaning more competition for beef. Total meat output for 1977 is expected to be about the same as last year.

Also, 1977 beef output still will be relatively large in comparison with most previous years.

"With relatively large beef production and increased pork and broiler supplies, any price advance in the fed cattle market much above late May levels is unlikely," the report said.

"For 1977, the price of choice steers at Omaha may average in the low $40 range, up from $39 per 100 pounds in 1976."

Even so, steer prices on the big Omaha market are expected to be higher at the end of 1977 than they were at the start. The report said they might average $42 to $45 per 100 pounds in the second half of this year, compared with less than $38 in the first quarter and an estimated $41 to $43 this spring. Retail pork prices might be 8 to 10 per cent higher this summer than a year ago, with hog supplies declining slightly.

"Also, much of the recent advance in live hog prices has not yet been reflected at retail," officials said. "The seasonal advance in broiler prices may average 5 per cent."

But pork production will pick up seasonally next fall and probably will bring some easing of prices for both pork and broilers as well as temper the increases in beef prices.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department expects to begin buying barrels of cheese soon to help raise the farm price of milk to the government's price support level.

As a step toward the purchase of so-called barrel cheese, USDA said Monday it has discontinued buying "process" cheese, the kind familiar to consumers in two-pound blocks and in slices, as part of the price support program.

"This action was taken because such purchases have failed to maintain the market price for cheese and the farm price for the milk from which it is manufactured," the department said.

In April and May, the average market price for manufacturing-grade milk was $8.72 per 100 pounds, compared with the price support of $9 per 100 pounds.

Under the law, USDA must buy milk products, including cheese, butter and nonfat dry milk, at sufficiently high prices to maintain the price support of milk at the farm.

The price support rate is translated into prices paid by USDA for specific products sold to the government by processors. In that way, the handlers and processors are supposed to pay farmers at least the minimum price set under the supports.

Since last fall, the department has bought about 85 million pounds of process cheese, including 28 million purchased in March and April under this year's higher support price.

The converted price support rate offered by USDA for barrel cheese is 95 cents a pound, the equivalent of manufacturing grade milk at $9 per hundredweight.

"However, since April, the market price for barrel cheese from which process cheese is made has been no higher than 93.5 cents per pound (at Wisconsin assembly points) and is now only 91 cents," the department said.

"Thus, the market price for barrel cheese is the equivalent of 40 cents per hundredweight of milk below the support price of $9," officials said.

Barrel cheese was developed in the 1950s, using barrels containing about 500 pounds of cheese.

To qualify as processed cheese, barrel cheese must be ground, cooked and homogenized. The department, a spokesman said, has bought processed cheese at a maximum of $1.01 a pound as part of its price support program and so far has not purchased barrel cheese.

Now, however, purchases are expected to involve barrel cheese at the price support level of 95 cents a pound. The department's Commodity Credit Corporation, which does the buying and selling under price support programs, also buys natural 40-pound block cheese at 98 cents a pound.

"These prices are equivalent to the support price of milk and are sufficiently high for plants to pay producers the support for their milk," the department said.

Cheese and other milk products bought under the price support program are available for donation to schools, other institutions and through overseas aid programs. It also can be sold back to the industry when market prices go up.

WASHINGTON (AP) — About six out of 10 hired farm workers continue to be people under 25 years of age, according to the Agriculture Department.

Last year about 59 per cent of the hired farm labor force was in the 14 to 25-year age group, about the same as it was in 1975, the department's Economic Research Service said Monday.

About 40 per cent of the under-25 workers in 1976 were students who performed summer and other seasonal work.

"The importance of people under 25 to the seasonal agricultural labor force has been steadily increasing," the agency said. "In 1962, only about 45 per cent of all people doing hired farm work were under 25 and 26 per cent were students."

Officials said the information was gathered in an annual survey of the U.S. farm labor market. A full report will be available later this year, a spokesman said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite too much rain in some areas and not enough in others, farmers are headed for another bumper wheat crop.

The Agriculture Department says as of June 5 most of the winter wheat was headed out and combines were harvesting fields in much of the southern part of the country. But in the main breadbasket of the Great Plains, the harvest is lagging because of wet weather in some areas. About 13 per cent of the Texas wheat was combined as of June 5, and about 2 per cent in Oklahoma, both behind normal progress, the department said Tuesday in a weekly weather report.

Winter wheat makes up about three-fourths of the U.S. wheat supply. Spring-planted varieties in the northern states provide the remainder.

A month ago, USDA forecast that the 1977 winter wheat harvest will be about 1.48 billion bushels. Although that estimate was down 6 per cent from the 1976 harvest, it was 3 per cent more than USDA indicated last December in its initial crop forecast.

The Agriculture Department scheduled a new winter wheat estimate today based on surveys made on June 1.

Some private forecasters say the new estimate will be larger than last month's.

In its weather report, the department said last week's rain in many parts of the country helped corn and other crops. The West and parts of the South, however, continue to need moisture.

With nearly all of the corn planted, development is "far ahead of recent years" across much of the country, officials said.

"In the Corn Belt, the average plant height ranged from 8 to 16 inches," the report said.

"Most of the early corn was too tall to cultivate. Kentucky's early corn grew shoulder-high, and Wisconsin reached knee-high."

Normally, the average corn plant in the Midwest is five or six inches high by June 5, officials said.

With corn planting out of the way, soybean planting has made rapid progress. By June 5, 84 per cent of the acreage was planted, compared with 80 per cent a year ago, and the average progress on June 5 was 61 per cent.

WASHINGTON (AP) — World cotton production may rise about 10 per cent in 1977-78, the new International Cotton Advisory Committee says.

The committee, which represents cotton producing and consuming countries, said Tuesday there could be "significantly higher planted acreage," of cotton.

"Moreover, a large part of the expansion in acreage is occurring in countries where yields usually run much higher than the world average, which holds out the potential for a larger gain in harvest than suggested by area figures alone," the committee said.

Thus, 1977-78 cotton output could be around 63.8 million bales worldwide, compared with 57.8 million last season.

The committee said that the largest increases are likely to occur in the United States, Mexico, Turkey, Greece and Colombia.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union is headed for another bumper grain harvest this year, including a substantial increase in wheat production.

The Agriculture Department estimated Tuesday that 1977 Russian grain output will be 215 million metric tons, the third largest harvest on record. The 1976 grain harvest was a record 223.8 million tons and the second-ranking production was 222.5 million tons in 1973.

Officials said that Soviet crops have benefitted from "generally favorable weather and soil moisture conditions" although some parts of the spring crop area need rain.

If realized, the Soviet harvest could lead to a further buildup in grain reserves. The department's task force on Soviet grain said that further reports will shed more light on 1977 production.

Those reports will be issued approximately each month throughout the remainder of the grain season.

ARGENTINE DAM PROMOTES PROGRESS

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — The new Ullum Dam in western Argentina, scheduled for completion in mid-1979, will open up the desert zone of San Juan Province in the Andes foothills to colonization and additional agricultural farmland.

More than 60 per cent of the work on Ullum Dam has been completed, and now work is starting on the 1,075-acre park zone around the dam site.

In addition to adding to the panorama from high above on Mount Ullum, the dam will be used to irrigate the arid region, enabling people to settle on farms. This government plan is designed to aid in depopulating urban centers such as Greater Buenos Aires, and to boost the country's agriculture.

Farmers asked to report planted acreage on 4 crops

NEW MADRID— County farmers are asked to report the planted acreage of wheat, cotton, corn and grain sorghum to the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS). According to Larry Blunt, director of the New Madrid County ASCS Office, proposed farm legislation could call for the implementation of set-aside for 1978 crops.

"The acreage required to be set aside as a condition of eligibility for program benefits may be based on a percentage of the acreage planted for harvest in 1977," Blunt said.

Under proposed legislegislation, the reported acreage will not be used for purposes of establishing allotments. By obtaining the acreages, the Secretary of Agriculture will have a full range oif options if the 1978 set-aside is necessary, Blunt explained.

"Crop acreages and the crop use must be reported on a field-by-field basis," Blunt said.

Farmers who have planted acreage in 1977-crop wheat, corn, grain sorghum or barley, and fail to report such acreage may be ineligible for program benefits in 1978, Blunt said. He pointed out that random spot checks will be made to assure accurate reporting.

The ASCS acreage report requirement is effective immediately.

Associated Press Writer

Long before it was in vogue to be energy-conscious, the American farmer claimed fuel conservation was as basic to farm life as the tractor and plow.

"Farm people have been promoting fuel conservation for years because fuel is one of the biggest costs of farming," said Richard Basore, a central Kansas farmer. "We can't pass our costs along because we well on an open market."

Indeed, the farmer's very livelihood is tied to energy. Diesel fuel powers the tractors and combines that work his land; gasoline fuels the family car for trips into town and natural gas is essential for the fertilizer and irrigation systems that nurture his crops.

It is clear to many farm experts who have studied President Carter's national energy proposals, however, that merely being energy-conscious will not be enough. Such alternatives as coal and solar energy must be developed soon, they said in interviews, if farm production costs are to be kept from spiraling upward with conventional fuel prices.

Dr. T. Roy Bogle, an extension economist at Kansas State University, contends farmers first must develop alternative fuels to natural gas, used heavily for irrigation, fertilizer production and grain drying but which under the Carter package would be allowed to rise in price beginning next year.

Until that happens, however, farmers have two choices: cut back their energy use-perhaps by working fewer acres of land-or be willing to pay the higher prices.

The farmers' dependence on machinery and automobile transportation is reflected in Agriculture Department statistics breaking down energy use. Field machinery consumes the greatest amount, 30 per cent, while transportation requires 25 per cent.

On-farm use of fuel traditionally has been excempt from federal taxes and that policy is expected to continue. But the bsic cost of diesel fuel is forecast to rise. And just like city residents, the farmer would be pinched heavily by Carter's proposed gasoline tax.

Carter indicated in his proposal to Congress that he would exempt crop dryers and fertilizer manufacturers from a proposed tax on large natural gas users. Of natural gas used in agriculture, these areas—plus irrigation—require most of the fuel.

But Rep. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, cautions farmers not to be "lulled into continued reliance on natural gas" as a result.

"Farmers should remember two things," he said. "First, the price of natural gas is going up, way up. Secondly, we're eventually going to be facing very limited supplies, if we don't run out altogether. Farmers must look for alternatives."

Carter asked Congress to allow the price of newly discovered natural gas to rise to $1.75 per thousand cubic feet at the well, while present reserves-estimated at the nine-year supply—would remain at the regulated price.

The Federal Power Commission's wellhead prices for interstate gas range from 26 cents per thousand cubic feet for the oldest gas to $1.42 per thousand cubic feet for the newest gas. The average price is estimated at 75 cents.

American agriculture used 176 billion cubic feet of natural gas for 1976 production, a sizable portion of which went for irrigation, and more than 80 per cent of the nation's irrigated farmland is in 17 western states.

"The blended price of reserve and new gas will be phased over a nine-year period which certainly eases the impact on irrigation farming," said Frank Trotman, executive secretary of the Southwest Kansas Irrigation Association. "With the depressed prices for our crops, we just could not stand a drastic overnight increase."

Providing an alternative power source to irrigation — electricity, coal or solar energy—will take years, Trotman said, so farmers either will have to reduce irrigatin or absorb the increased expense.

Farmers also may have to prepare to absorb eventual increases in fertilizer production costs as a result of the graduated rise in natural gas prices, said Raymond Early, vice president fertilizer for Farmland Industries of Kansas City.

"I would say if the farmer doesn't see improvement in the prices he receives (for crops), he's going to have to take a definite look at his fertility programs," Early said. "He might find he can reduce one year and have little effect."

New means of deriving nitrogen fertilizers from a source other than natural gas such as coal, are being explored, he said. Nitrogen combined with hydrogen provided by a hydrocarbon from natural gas produces anhydrous ammonia, the basis of nitrogen fertilizers.

"We may eventually be able to convert plans to coal gasification," said Donald Collins of the Fertilizer Institute in Washington. "But in the foreseeable future, it will be unlikely we'll switch totally from natural gas in ammonia production."

Solar energy may be one of the most promising alternatives to the use of natural gas by farmers.

The U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration plans to begin tests in Arizona by 1979 in which solar power would be used to pump irrigation water from deep wells.

And the Batelle Memorial Institute, an internationally known scientific research organization based in Columbus, Ohio, recently installed what it bills as the world's largest solar-powered irrigation system near Phoenix, Ariz.

"Solar energy is an inflation-proof device, " said Peter Hofmann, associate director of the program. "No one can jack up the energy costs and that's what makes it attractive in the energy economy we live in."

But Hofmann cautioned that the cost of building such a system, which operates a 50-horsepower motor to draw water from the ground, would be about $200,000. He said the cost could be cut by a third or a fourth when mass production of solar irrigation systems is accomplished.

"Assuming certain rises in conventional energy costs, and assuming a decline in the cost of solar equipment, we think in four to five years such solar installation would be competitive with conventional systems," he said.

The initial cost to install a solar system probably always would be greater than putting in a conventional system, the scientist said, but its operating cost over the life of the systems would be less.

Additionally, Hofmann said, "irrigation only takes place in certain parts of the year, so you could use your system for grain drying, heating of liveeock shelters, even farm residences."

It is too late to bring Old Dobbin out of retirement and scrap the tractors and other farm machinery that will consume an estimated 6.5 billion gallons of gasoline and diesel fuel in 1977 production.

In fact, while Americans are being urged to drive smaller, more economical cars, aarmers are buying larger, more powerful tractors. But there's a good reason.

"Farmers look at the amount of fuel used per acre, not per mipe," said Rich Stoy of J. I. Case Manufacturng Co. "If they try to run two, three, four smaller horsepower tractors, their costs will be larger than using one big tractor. So with a big tractor you're going to be saving."

Bob Parrett, district manager in Kearney, Neb., for Steiger Tractor Inc., said a 450-horsepower, four-wheel-drive tractor just introduced by his company has attracted more buyers "than we would ever have believed."

The use of diesel fuel for farm machinery has reduced fuel consumption by an average of 30 per cent over gasoline-powered engines, according to William A. Hewitt, chairman of John Deere Co. of Moline, Ill.

"We are working on more energy-efficient engines using advanced fuel injection, high-ratio turbocharging and extending the art of inter-cooling" to further fuel efficiency, he told a recent meeting of company stockholders.

Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., has introduced a bill in the House to establish government research programs to develop "gasohol," an ethyl alcohol mixture derived from crops.

"The bill would set government programs moving on pilot projects," Glickman said of the mixture he hopes could become an alternative or supplement to diesel fuel and gasoline used on the farm.

"We have the technology to make it, but it hasn't been produced economically and we need to find ways to do that," he said.

Farm Roundup

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says consumers will pay more for beef and pork this summer than they did a year ago and the price surge probably will continue moderately next fall.

Higher meat prices have been predicted for months by USDA and other livestock experts. However, they are not predicting that meat prices will skyrocket immediately or that they will soar to record levels.

Much will depend on the weather, and how farmers and ranchers adjust their inventories of cattle, hogs and poultry. As always, grain prices and the size of the harvests will be important factors.

But cattle producers, particularly, have trimmed herds sharply to offset financial losses, and this will mean less beef, the main item in the American meat diet.

Following stable prices in the first half of the year, consumers will face higher retail meat prices during the second half, the Department's Outlook and Situation Board said Monday.

"Smaller beef supplies, improved consumer demand, and higher marketing costs will more than offset continued large pork and broiler supplies," the report said.

The supermarket price of choice-grade beef from grain-fed cattle, which is used as a standard by USDA in comparing prices, is expected to average 3 to 4 per cent higher during the summer quarter than this spring, officials said.

"Hamburger prices could advance more than those for choice beef, if slaughter of cows and forage-fed steers and heifers declines this summer as expected," a report said. "Further moderate retail price increases for choice beef and hamburger are expected this fall."

The main sources of hamburger are cows and other cattle which are not "finished" for the slaughter-market in feedlots. If farmers and ranchers send fewer of those animals to market there will be less hamburger and prices will go up.

But producers have sharply boosted the supply of pork and broiler chickens the past year, meaning more competition for beef. Total meat output for 1977 is expected to be about the same as last year.

Also, 1977 beef output still will be relatively large in comparison with most previous years.

"With relatively large beef production and increased pork and broiler supplies, any price advance in the fed cattle market much above late May levels is unlikely," the report said.

"For 1977, the price of choice steers at Omaha may average in the low $40 range, up from $39 per 100 pounds in 1976."

Even so, steer prices on the big Omaha market are expected to be higher at the end of 1977 than they were at the start. The report said they might average $42 to $45 per 100 pounds in the second half of this year, compared with less than $38 in the first quarter and an estimated $41 to $43 this spring. Retail pork prices might be 8 to 10 per cent higher this summer than a year ago, with hog supplies declining slightly.

"Also, much of the recent advance in live hog prices has not yet been reflected at retail," officials said. "The seasonal advance in broiler prices may average 5 per cent."

But pork production will pick up seasonally next fall and probably will bring some easing of prices for both pork and broilers as well as temper the increases in beef prices.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department expects to begin buying barrels of cheese soon to help raise the farm price of milk to the government's price support level.

As a step toward the purchase of so-called barrel cheese, USDA said Monday it has discontinued buying "process" cheese, the kind familiar to consumers in two-pound blocks and in slices, as part of the price support program.

"This action was taken because such purchases have failed to maintain the market price for cheese and the farm price for the milk from which it is manufactured," the department said.

In April and May, the average market price for manufacturing-grade milk was $8.72 per 100 pounds, compared with the price support of $9 per 100 pounds.

Under the law, USDA must buy milk products, including cheese, butter and nonfat dry milk, at sufficiently high prices to maintain the price support of milk at the farm.

The price support rate is translated into prices paid by USDA for specific products sold to the government by processors. In that way, the handlers and processors are supposed to pay farmers at least the minimum price set under the supports.

Since last fall, the department has bought about 85 million pounds of process cheese, including 28 million purchased in March and April under this year's higher support price.

The converted price support rate offered by USDA for barrel cheese is 95 cents a pound, the equivalent of manufacturing grade milk at $9 per hundredweight.

"However, since April, the market price for barrel cheese from which process cheese is made has been no higher than 93.5 cents per pound (at Wisconsin assembly points) and is now only 91 cents," the department said.

"Thus, the market price for barrel cheese is the equivalent of 40 cents per hundredweight of milk below the support price of $9," officials said.

Barrel cheese was developed in the 1950s, using barrels containing about 500 pounds of cheese.

To qualify as processed cheese, barrel cheese must be ground, cooked and homogenized. The department, a spokesman said, has bought processed cheese at a maximum of $1.01 a pound as part of its price support program and so far has not purchased barrel cheese.

Now, however, purchases are expected to involve barrel cheese at the price support level of 95 cents a pound. The department's Commodity Credit Corporation, which does the buying and selling under price support programs, also buys natural 40-pound block cheese at 98 cents a pound.

"These prices are equivalent to the support price of milk and are sufficiently high for plants to pay producers the support for their milk," the department said.

Cheese and other milk products bought under the price support program are available for donation to schools, other institutions and through overseas aid programs. It also can be sold back to the industry when market prices go up.

WASHINGTON (AP) — About six out of 10 hired farm workers continue to be people under 25 years of age, according to the Agriculture Department.

Last year about 59 per cent of the hired farm labor force was in the 14 to 25-year age group, about the same as it was in 1975, the department's Economic Research Service said Monday.

About 40 per cent of the under-25 workers in 1976 were students who performed summer and other seasonal work.

"The importance of people under 25 to the seasonal agricultural labor force has been steadily increasing," the agency said. "In 1962, only about 45 per cent of all people doing hired farm work were under 25 and 26 per cent were students."

Officials said the information was gathered in an annual survey of the U.S. farm labor market. A full report will be available later this year, a spokesman said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite too much rain in some areas and not enough in others, farmers are headed for another bumper wheat crop.

The Agriculture Department says as of June 5 most of the winter wheat was headed out and combines were harvesting fields in much of the southern part of the country. But in the main breadbasket of the Great Plains, the harvest is lagging because of wet weather in some areas. About 13 per cent of the Texas wheat was combined as of June 5, and about 2 per cent in Oklahoma, both behind normal progress, the department said Tuesday in a weekly weather report.

Winter wheat makes up about three-fourths of the U.S. wheat supply. Spring-planted varieties in the northern states provide the remainder.

A month ago, USDA forecast that the 1977 winter wheat harvest will be about 1.48 billion bushels. Although that estimate was down 6 per cent from the 1976 harvest, it was 3 per cent more than USDA indicated last December in its initial crop forecast.

The Agriculture Department scheduled a new winter wheat estimate today based on surveys made on June 1.

Some private forecasters say the new estimate will be larger than last month's.

In its weather report, the department said last week's rain in many parts of the country helped corn and other crops. The West and parts of the South, however, continue to need moisture.

With nearly all of the corn planted, development is "far ahead of recent years" across much of the country, officials said.

"In the Corn Belt, the average plant height ranged from 8 to 16 inches," the report said.

"Most of the early corn was too tall to cultivate. Kentucky's early corn grew shoulder-high, and Wisconsin reached knee-high."

Normally, the average corn plant in the Midwest is five or six inches high by June 5, officials said.

With corn planting out of the way, soybean planting has made rapid progress. By June 5, 84 per cent of the acreage was planted, compared with 80 per cent a year ago, and the average progress on June 5 was 61 per cent.

WASHINGTON (AP) — World cotton production may rise about 10 per cent in 1977-78, the new International Cotton Advisory Committee says.

The committee, which represents cotton producing and consuming countries, said Tuesday there could be "significantly higher planted acreage," of cotton.

"Moreover, a large part of the expansion in acreage is occurring in countries where yields usually run much higher than the world average, which holds out the potential for a larger gain in harvest than suggested by area figures alone," the committee said.

Thus, 1977-78 cotton output could be around 63.8 million bales worldwide, compared with 57.8 million last season.

The committee said that the largest increases are likely to occur in the United States, Mexico, Turkey, Greece and Colombia.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union is headed for another bumper grain harvest this year, including a substantial increase in wheat production.

The Agriculture Department estimated Tuesday that 1977 Russian grain output will be 215 million metric tons, the third largest harvest on record. The 1976 grain harvest was a record 223.8 million tons and the second-ranking production was 222.5 million tons in 1973.

Officials said that Soviet crops have benefitted from "generally favorable weather and soil moisture conditions" although some parts of the spring crop area need rain.

If realized, the Soviet harvest could lead to a further buildup in grain reserves. The department's task force on Soviet grain said that further reports will shed more light on 1977 production.

Those reports will be issued approximately each month throughout the remainder of the grain season.

ARGENTINE DAM PROMOTES PROGRESS

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — The new Ullum Dam in western Argentina, scheduled for completion in mid-1979, will open up the desert zone of San Juan Province in the Andes foothills to colonization and additional agricultural farmland.

More than 60 per cent of the work on Ullum Dam has been completed, and now work is starting on the 1,075-acre park zone around the dam site.

In addition to adding to the panorama from high above on Mount Ullum, the dam will be used to irrigate the arid region, enabling people to settle on farms. This government plan is designed to aid in depopulating urban centers such as Greater Buenos Aires, and to boost the country's agriculture.

Soil laboratory will test plant element levels

Area Agronomy Specialist

Testing growing plants is an accurate method of determining levels of major and minor elements present in the plants. The Area Soil Testing Laboratory at Portageville is offering this service to farmers again this year.

Any crop can be sampled. Corn is the first one to sample in our area. Corn planted in April is about ready to be sampled. You should begin sampling when you see the first silks emerging. Follow these steps in order to get a good sample.

(1) When to sample-when silks begin to emerge but before they dry.

(2) Part of plant-take the entire "ear" or "shoot" leaf. Take leaf from top ear if stalk has two ears.

(3) How to sample-remove one leaf per plant from 15 to 20 plants selected at random in the field. Break off leaf at base. Do not include portions of leaf sheath. Be sure hands are clean.

(4) Care and handling of sample-start with a clean bag. A kraft paper bag is ideal for collecting, drying and marking samples. It must be clean. New, unused bags are available at most grocers. The 10 to 12 lbs. sizes are satisfactory for corn.

(5) Carry an open bag-drop the leaves in the open bag as they are removed from plants. Leave them loose to allow for air drying. Do not wad or tie the leaves into a bundle. Heating and molding may occur. Do not use a plastic bag.

(6) Leave the bag open-do not close the bag after the sample has been collected. Take sample immediately to your University Extension Center, Area Soil Testing Laboratory, Portageville, or air dry and then deliver or mail it.

It is also a good idea to take a soil sample from same area as plant sample. The results of both plant and soil will help in making fertilizer recommendations for next year's crop.

Every farmer should take at least one sample from his best corn field and one from his problem field. Tissue testing will tell you if adequate plant nutrients are available for maximum yields. If your plants are deficient in nitrogen or one of the micronutrients, and central pivot irrigation is available, nutrients can be applied to correct the problem. A few farmers in the area have already sampled a field or two. You can get more information about plant testing by contacting your local University Extension Center. Request a copy of MU guide 9131, "Sampling Plant Tissue and Soil for Analysis." Check with your local fertilizer dealer. He will probably have copies of the guide and information sheets for samples.

Farmers asked to report planted acreage on 4 crops

NEW MADRID— County farmers are asked to report the planted acreage of wheat, cotton, corn and grain sorghum to the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS). According to Larry Blunt, director of the New Madrid County ASCS Office, proposed farm legislation could call for the implementation of set-aside for 1978 crops.

"The acreage required to be set aside as a condition of eligibility for program benefits may be based on a percentage of the acreage planted for harvest in 1977," Blunt said.

Under proposed legiaslegislation, the reported acreage will not be used for purposes of establishing allotments. By obtaining the acreages, the Secretary of Agriculture will have a full range oif options if the 1978 set-aside is necessary, Blunt explained.

"Crop acreages and the crop use must be reported on a field-by-field basis," Blunt said.

Farmers who have planted acreage in 1977-crop wheat, corn, grain sorghum or barley, and fail to report such acreage may be ineligible for program benefits in 1978, Blunt said. He pointed out that random spot checks will be made to assure accurate reporting.

The ASCS acreage report requirement is effective immediately.

Celebration of the 50th anniversary of Charles A. Lindbergh's epic flight across the Atlantic continues. As part of it, his cross country barnstorming tour, undertaken in the "Spirit of St. Louis" shortly after his triumphant return to the United States, will berecreated by the Experimental Aircraft Association Foundation.

Lindbergh's 1927 tour was completed in three months and three days and included stops in 82 cities in each of the then 48 states. According to aviation historians, it did nearly as much to launch the nation into the new age of commercial aviation as did his solo transoceanic crossing.

Beginning with a June 15 takeoff from Long Island, N.Y., the 1977 tour, using a replica of the "Spirit of St. Louis" built by the foundation and piloted by members of the Experimental Aircraft Association, will take four and a half months. Although 20 extra stops have been added, the commemorative tour will closely approximate Lindbergh's original route around the country.

An interesting footnote, especially in view of Lindbergh's lifelong interest in the environment, is the fact that the original "Spirit" was powdered with lead-free gasoline. Appropriately, the replica flight will also use lead-free fuel.

There is one thing the foundation could not duplicate, however: Lindbergh and his backers invested $15,000 in the original "Spirit;" its modern- day counterpart cost approximately $100,000 to build.

FULL METRIC SPEED AHEAD

The nation will take a major step toward eventual universal adoption of the metric system next year when highway speed limit signs are changed from miles per hour to kilometers per hour.

Under regulations being drawn up by the Federal Highway Administration, the conversion will take place in a 90-day period ending Sept. 30, 1978, following a massive public awareness and information campaign.

Wisely, the a agency has decided not to initiate a dual system, with signs showing both kilometers per hour and miles per hour. The only way to learn a foreign language is to jump in and swim without depending upon the constant support of translation, and to most Americans, metric is a foreign language.

Easing the changeover will be the fact that 1978 model cars will come equipped with metric speedometers and odometers. Older models can be converted with a transparent stick-on overlay.

Motorists will also be able to exceed the speed limit with slightly better consciences under the mextric system. Since the present national speed limit of 55 m.p.h. translates into 88.5 k.p.h., the plan is to make the new limit 90 k.p.h. Other limits will also be rounded to the nearest easily recognizable number.

To Go Metric, Think Metric

Like it or not the nation is going metric, a change that many people have advocated for years. In fact, it is the measure used exclusively in some professions.

According to regulations being formulated by the Federal Highway Administration, by next year all roadway speed signs will be in metric figures. The planned date for complete changeover is Sept. 30, 1978. Connecticut motorists have already been introduced to the conversion. Many highways host signs designating distances between between cities in both English and metric figures. The new signs will carry only metric characters.

In an effort to wean people from the old familiar English system the Federal Government has planned a massive campaign to promote public awareness. Automobile makers are prepared to install updated speedometes in 1978 model cars. For those who have older cars a paste-on version will be available which can be placed over the existing speedometer.

Rather than bemoan the expanded use of the metric system, Americans would be wise to put their energy into accepting it. The best policy is simply, think metric.

There is one small advantage in the change to metric speed signs. Drivers will probably be permitted to drive slightly faster than the current 55 miles per hour speed limit. As it stands that figure translates to 88.5 kilometers (kph). Indications are it will be increased to 90 kph to make it simpler. It's somewhat like administering a little bit of sugar to make the medicine go down.

Coffee For Tired Blood?

People with "tired blood" may someday get a boost from drinking coffee that has been fortified with iron-if the zooming cost of the nation's favority beverage doesn't get them first.

Iron deficiency, particularly among women of childbearing age, is a public health problem, say researchers with the Agriculture Department's Human Nutrition Laboratory in Grand Forks, N.D. Iron-fortified coffee could be a solution, they told a scientific conference in Chicago the other day.

Although breads and cereals are generally fortified with iron, and have been for years, many women are reluctant to eat enough of these foods to satisfy their iron requirement. But they do drink coffee, whether it is good for them or not.

In their experiments, the researchers added 3.28 milligrams of an iron supplement, ferrous fumarate, to each gram of dry coffee grounds. Tests with our laboratory friends the rats indicated that four cups of similarly fortified coffee could provide an adult woman with about 70 per cent of her minimum daily requirement of iron.

None of the 20 employees of the laboratory who sampled the brew could tell any difference in taste, aroma or color between fortified coffee and unfortified coffee.

The cost of the ferrous furmarate used in the study was less than a penny for enough to fortify three pounds of ground coffee.

THE PERFECT A ASSIST

Some years ago when I was living in New York. I had a friend, named Andy, who was a push-over. I often thougnt people took advantage of him, but he didn't seem to care. One day while Andy was walking me home, a young woman approached us in great anxiety. She had a bandaid over her nose, cotton stuffed up each nostril, and was carrying two shopping bags overloaded with packages.

"Excuse me, please," she began. "I was on the subway coming from my doctor's and my purse was stolen. My bus ticket to New Jersey was in it. I've got some change but not enough for another ticket. I just need 86c. I hate to ask for help this way, but..." she faltered. "I'd pay you back if you'd give me your address."

I sighed. I could tell immediately that she was a hustler. She knew 86c was a lot of change for a person to find. She was probably hoping a dollar would be offered. I was right. Andy didn't have the change and was pulling a dollar out of his wallet. "I think I have some money," I said quickly. I saw her face fall as I changed Andy's dollar and he gave her the 86c. She thanked him, however, and insisted that he write down his address.

"You didn't believe all that?" I asked Andy after she left.

"Sure," he shrugged. anyway, if she really did need the money, that 86c will do more good in her pocket than it would in mine."

It was useless to argue with him, but a few weeks later I saw a chance to make my point. We were in the subway station when I spied her again, in the same condition as before. I nudged Andy. "It looks like she's getting ready for some more customers."

"Kind of looks that way," he answered but said nothing more. Five minutes later as we passed a blind beggar, he dropped a dollar bill in the man's cup. "The trouble with you, Barb," he said, "is you haven't any faith." Then he shoved something in my hand. It was a check from a New Jersey bank for 86c.

The Lesson Of Watergate

The judge: He was not the Chief Justice, not a congressional committee chairman, not even an American. The moral magistrate of Richard Nixon's guilt was, finally, a British journalist who, like the defendant, stood to gain great profit from the trial.

The defendant: That Richard Nixon had been unseen for three years was startling in itself. For many of us, our entire adult lives can be calibrated by his six (or was it 60) crises. How minutely, thus, we inspected the deepened seams on the mask of his face, and wondered whether he thought even a million dollars could compensate him for the self-degradation of each new (tell-tale?) fluff, fumble and evasion. And yet, before it was over, the mask, for once, fell away. After declaring he would never grovel, Richard Nixon, in his own way, apologized: "I let down my friends. I let down the country. I let down our system of government."

The verdict: There can be none. The very nature of the trial stacked the deck in the defendant's favor. Who could follow all the confusing or forgotten detail of what was said (or meant) when? In this setting, even resolvable disputes over facts could not be resolved. The interviewer could not slam down a gavel and declare, Overruled." The most he could do was to agree to disagree; one man's word against another. Truth was neutered.

It doesn't matter any more. Indeed, to keep gnawing at the bone of Watergate guilt is foolishly distracting-as if arrogance, deceit and abuse of power began, or ended, with Richard Nixon; as if convicting him now would somehow relieve us of respnosibility for the future. What does matter is how the past three years have affected the other side of the screen. What lasting furrows of wisdom has Watergate impressed onto the American brow?

The nation has, so far, responded with a tide of reforem. The campaign finance law already has vastly lessened the impact of private money on our choice of presidents, and that benign result is likely soon to be extended to congressional elections. Congress has risen from its torpid acquiescence to the Executive Branch and now asserts itself generally, notably in overseeing intelligence activities and the federal budget. Both Congress and the Executive are now fashioning new ethical codes, including extensive financial disclosure requirements.

Are such reforms adequate? Cynics already wonder whether they will not quickly degenerate into perfunctory piety. Some legislators seem resigned to enacting lifeless monuments to a fleeting national attention span. It will take years to findout; the ultimateWatergate trial lies ahead. It will test not our capacity to blame Richard Nixon but our ability to monotor and adjust the checks and balances we profess to be precious-to understand the infectious imperatives of power.

FATHER'S DAY FANTASIES

WASHINGTON — Most people don't believe it, but fathers have fantasies about their children, too. Her are a few I've collected from fathers I've spoken to.

"Hello, Mr. Guilford. This is Nat Lefkowitz of the William Morris Theatrical Agency. I just saw your 12-year-old daughter perform in the school play at Holton Arms as the wicked stepmother in the production of 'Cinderella,' and I was so impressed with her performance that I was wondering if you would consider letting her play the lead in th road show of 'Annie,' the Broadway hit musical. It would pay $2,000 a week and we would, of course, see that you and her mother would be able to travel with her during the run."

"Mr. Minow, this is the chairman of the Coca-Cola Company. Your son's science teacher sent us a formula for a new diet soft drink which we were so impressed with that we would like to buy it from him. Since he is still a minor we thought it best to talk to you. We are prepared to pay $100,000 for the formula and 1 cent royalty on every bottle sold. I'll give you my home number if you arrive at a decision."

"Hello, is this Mr. Harold Lachman? This is Police Sergeant Kelly at the 33rd Precinct. We have your son here. Before you get upset, let me explain that he dove into the river fully clothed and saved an 8-month-old baby from drowning. I was wondering if you would bring a dry set of clothes to the police station for him?"

"Dad, I just wanted to tell you that you were right, and I was wrong. I'll never question your judgment again."

"Mr. Wanamaker. This is Dr. Winstead. Our laboratory made a terrible mistake on the pregnancy test and got the rabbits mixed up. Your daughter is suffering from nothing more than a bad stomachache. I'm terribly sorry to have gotten you and your wife all upset--but you know how those things are."

"Dad, I'd like you to meet my new boyfriend, Arnold Rockefeller. He doesn't drink or smoke pot and is now working for his Uncle David in the bank. Because of his hours, he has to bring me home no later than 11 o'clock at night. Arnold is interested in scouting. He has never had a traffic ticket for speeding. He loves to play golf and tennis. He would like you and Mom to visit his family at Newport this summer. They could send their private plane for you any time you would like to do it."

"Hello, my name is Patrick O'Brien and I'm a scout for the Notre Dame football team. I just saw your son out there throw a football. I was wondering if he would be willing to go to Notre Dame on a four-year athletic scholarship. I can't promise you that he'll play first string in his freshman year, but from what I've seen so far, I would be amazed if the coach would want to keep him on the bench."

"Dad, I know this may not be the time to talk about it, but I just wanted to reassure you that when you retire I have every intention of supporting you in your old age. I'm only starting out in business, but I've set aside a part of my salary for a trust fund for you and Mom. As I rise up the ladder of success, I will put more and more in it. I hope you will be able to live on the interest from the fund, but I've set it up so you can touch the principal any time you and Mom want to take a trip or buy something. It's just my small way of saying 'Thank you for everything you've done.' "

"Mr. Melton, this is Time magazine calling. We're doing a cover story on your daughter, Jeannette, who has been named 'Person of the Year,' and we were wondering if one of our reporters could come out and interview you for it?"

"Mr. Sanford, this is the White House calling. The President would like to know if it would be all right for your daughter, Nancy, to sleep in the tree house with Amy overnight?"

WILL THE FBI BE THE SAME?

By JACK ANDERSON and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — The FBI, once the Rock of Gibraltar of government agencies, has been shaken down to its foundations. Several agents have been accused of violating the laws they were sworn to uphold. One veteran of the wars against crime and sedition, John Kearney, has been indicted and faces trial.

This has stirred a great debate in the backrooms of Washington. Most agents have lined up solidly behind Kearney; they believe he has been singled out by the Justice Dept. as a scapegoat. The people around Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell, on the other hand, warn that agents must live by the laws they enforce.

Both sides have brought us confidential papers. We have listened to their impassioned arguments. The outcome could determine whether the FBI will survive as a formidable law enforcement agency.

As the bootleggers and gangsters of the 1920s gave way to the drug traffickers and revolutionaries of the 1970s, the FBI stood unscathed. Its minions developed a reputation for vigilance and integrity. The greenest agent in the field became accepted in his community as a fearless, incorruptible bloodhoud.

But increasingly the FBI devoted an incredible portion of its manpower, its budget and its priorities to spying on citizens who merely exercised the constitutional guarantees of free speech, assembly and petition.

The Socialist Workers party, for example, preaches a peaceful but unpopular Marxist political philosophy. It does not advocate the violent overthrow of the existing system.

The party has every right under the Constitution, therefore, to operate in this country. Yet some FBI officials, in their zeal, began to look upon themselves as less subject to the laws they required others to obey.

They allegedly burglarized party offices and stole financial records, membership lists and other documents. The Socialist Workesrs have shown us evidence, for example, that the FBI broke into their headquarters in Detroit in October, 1971.

Some of the stolen records mysteriously turned up in the files of the Detroit police. One woman, named Norma Jean Lodico, resigned from the party, which kept the only copy of resignation letter. Yet a copy of the letter later turned up in the files of the Civil Service Commission.

She was called in for questioning, as an Interior Dept. employee, about her "subversive" activities. Other people, whose names appeared on the stolen records, also began getting visits and phone calls from FBI agents.

The indicted Keaney, however, headed a special FBI team, which was assigned to investigate the Weathermen Underground. Unlike the Socialist Workers, the Weathermen were violent. They had claimed credit for numerous bombings across the country. FBI sources told us the weathermen were the most dangerous of all political dissidents.

Now, Kearney has been charged with using illegal wiretaps and mail tamperings during his investigation of the Weathermen. His supporters showed us a memo about the case, which makes the following points:

– Former Atty. Gen. Edward Levi, in a decision not to prosecute federal agents for opening mail, said: "Questions of the legality of intelligence methods ... did not reach the courts until this decade ...Whatever can be said about the law now, the Department believes at the time the potential defendants acted, there was substantial evidence for thinking that the law was otherwise."

– Levi maintained that officials "at the highest levels" failed to clarify investigative guidelines. Therefore, "all this would render a prosecution by the government hypocritical."

– Not until 1972 did the courts rule that the president lacks the power to authorize unwarranted wiretappings unless it involves foreign espionage. "In this connection," the document notes, "all the activities alleged in the Kearney indictment precede (this) decision."

– Former CIA chief Richard Helms authorized a surreptitious entry into a Fairfax, Va., photographic studio in a "national security case." Ex-FBI boss L. Patrick Gray also ordered a break-in of the home of a suspect believed to be in league with Arab terrorists. In each case, the Justice Dept. declined to prosecute. Yet it has indicted Kearney, a lower-level official, on similar charges.

– The courts have also ruled that federal agents can't be held responsible for actions that they believed were proper and had the approval of superiors. This decision arose out of the trial of Bernard Barker and Eugenio Martinez, the Watergate burglars, who were also charged with the burglary of the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

– The prosecution of Kearney will hinder future intelligence operations. Agents, despite orders from superiors, will be afraid to carry out the orders. "Why," demands the document, "should future agents disregard the warning that anything they do, no matter how well intentioned ... will be put to the test of strict criminal liability at a later time."

The Kearney case, as it approaches a showdown, should produce some fireworks.

Instant Citizenship?

White House insiders say Carter will Amnesty millions of illegal aliens

WASHINGTON— There will be no dragnet-ing of illegal aliens or anything resembling mass deportations, though "undocumented workers" hold 3.8 million jobs in the United States according to confidential Immigration and Naturalization Service reports now somewhere in President Carter's Oval Office.

In effect, this will grant mass amnesty as pledged to the Mexican-American community by Vice President Walter Mondale during the presidential campaign. This definitive policy on the illegals will be proclaimed by Jimmy Carter "shortly" says a member of the cabinet-level task force on the undocumented ones. And it will mean that the six million who have flooded into the U.S. without benefit of official entry papers will have instant, quasi-legal status -- permanent right-to-residency in our country.

It's all more intricate than that. But that's the bottom line for the millions of illegal aliens already part of their communities and in hundreds of industries and many states other than those of citrus ranches and stoop-labor valleys.

Just how complex the illegal alien "problem" is, Mr. Carter learned during a victual mass meeting of some 30 cabinet members and consultants in the White House on May 24. There were those, such as task force "co-chairman" Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell, who said the illegals were illegal and should be punished for breaking the law.

There was Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, whose colleagues report he's actually for a massive amnesty. And there were the civil libertarians who are opposed to creating any sort of national identification system.

There is White House consideration of the issuance of a "work card." But the same genre who opposed the distribution of Social Security cards decades ago now fight the "work card" proposal.

The liberals are countered with the argument that the illegal alien "work card" would not be a national identification card (I.D.) as in the Soviet Union because no police authority of any kind would hae the power to demand its presentation for identification.

The card would have to be shown only to an employer -- just as the "boss" now has the right to ask a new jobholder for his or her Social Security number.

When the President makes this policy public "shortly" he is expected to announce the beefing up of the frontier patrols, border guards and customs officers. But only the naive believe that the long Mexican and Canadian boundary lines and Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific coasts can be secured from inundation by "illegals."

There are more angles to this problem than in a warehouse full of slide rules. There is the crime syndicate for example in Southern California. There, the underworld opearates "protected manufacturing plants" which whip out hundreds of thousands of garments a year.

Almost half the needle workers in Los Angeles County garment machine shops are illegal Mexicans. Mostly women. The International Ladies Garment Workers' Union hasn't been able to organize more than 10 per cent of them. The labor turnover is too swift. The mob is too strong. Many of the shops are "gorilla" controlled and have direct links to the Northeast crime families and in Chicago.

The women are mistreated. The illegals' miserable pay is slashed by skimming for check cashing services, for nonexistent union dues and insurance, according to the California Organized Crime and Criminal Intelligence Branch.

In New York City the illegals hold some 750,000 jobs-- many of them in the construction field. There are even two open-air hiring halls in the Big Apple.

And some federal authorities say coffi entially that many undocumented aliens work on projects paid for by the New York City Board of Education. One source charges that illegal aliens even help paint the Statue of Liberty. And there is an insistent demand for a full investigation.

Out on famed Long Island (N.Y.), which parallels the New England coastline, there are some 500,000 illegal aliens in well paying jobs -- as construction workers in boom areas, as domestics, as hospital employes -- the whole thing whirlpooled by surging suburbia.

No one in the White House has yet come up with an answer to the problem of cauterizing the ceaseless "invasion" of the United States. No one really actually knows how heavy is the toll in welfare, social security, Medicaid and Medicare and education. It does run into the scores of billions of dollars annuyally for the millions of non-employed illegals and their families.

Further, one task force adviser pointed out that any mass deportation of aliens to other lands, except Mexico, would make enough jobs available to citizens to cut the national unemployment figure to a "tolerable" 5 per cent.

But that won't happen. It will be the "work card" solution and in effect instant legal residence. Some will be sent home. But the rest will stay -- and pull in millions of new unlawful aliens from as far off as southern Italy (via Canada) and South America.

Celebration of the 50th anniversary of Charles A. Lindbergh's epic flight across the Atlantic continues. As part of it, his cross country barnstorming tour, undertaken in the "Spirit of St. Louis" shortly after his triumphant return to the United States, will berecreated by the Experimental Aircraft Association Foundation.

Lindbergh's 1927 tour was completed in three months and three days and included stops in 82 cities in each of the then 48 states. According to aviation historians, it did nearly as much to launch the nation into the new age of commercial aviation as did his solo transoceanic crossing.

Beginning with a June 15 takeoff from Long Island, N.Y., the 1977 tour, using a replica of the "Spirit of St. Louis" built by the foundation and piloted by members of the Experimental Aircraft Association, will take four and a half months. Although 20 extra stops have been added, the commemorative tour will closely approximate Lindbergh's original route around the country.

An interesting footnote, especially in view of Lindbergh's lifelong interest in the environment, is the fact that the original "Spirit" was powdered with lead-free gasoline. Appropriately, the replica flight will also use lead-free fuel.

There is one thing the foundation could not duplicate, however: Lindbergh and his backers invested $15,000 in the original "Spirit;" its modern- day counterpart cost approximately $100,000 to build.

FULL METRIC SPEED AHEAD

The nation will take a major step toward eventual universal adoption of the metric system next year when highway speed limit signs are changed from miles per hour to kilometers per hour.

Under regulations being drawn up by the Federal Highway Administration, the conversion will take place in a 90-day period ending Sept. 30, 1978, following a massive public awareness and information campaign.

Wisely, the a agency has decided not to initiate a dual system, with signs showing both kilometers per hour and miles per hour. The only way to learn a foreign language is to jump in and swim without depending upon the constant support of translation, and to most Americans, metric is a foreign language.

Easing the changeover will be the fact that 1978 model cars will come equipped with metric speedometers and odometers. Older models can be converted with a transparent stick-on overlay.

Motorists will also be able to exceed the speed limit with slightly better consciences under the mextric system. Since the present national speed limit of 55 m.p.h. translates into 88.5 k.p.h., the plan is to make the new limit 90 k.p.h. Other limits will also be rounded to the nearest easily recognizable number.

To Go Metric, Think Metric

Like it or not the nation is going metric, a change that many people have advocated for years. In fact, it is the measure used exclusively in some professions.

According to regulations being formulated by the Federal Highway Administration, by next year all roadway speed signs will be in metric figures. The planned date for complete changeover is Sept. 30, 1978. Connecticut motorists have already been introduced to the conversion. Many highways host signs designating distances between between cities in both English and metric figures. The new signs will carry only metric characters.

In an effort to wean people from the old familiar English system the Federal Government has planned a massive campaign to promote public awareness. Automobile makers are prepared to install updated speedometes in 1978 model cars. For those who have older cars a paste-on version will be available which can be placed over the existing speedometer.

Rather than bemoan the expanded use of the metric system, Americans would be wise to put their energy into accepting it. The best policy is simply, think metric.

There is one small advantage in the change to metric speed signs. Drivers will probably be permitted to drive slightly faster than the current 55 miles per hour speed limit. As it stands that figure translates to 88.5 kilometers (kph). Indications are it will be increased to 90 kph to make it simpler. It's somewhat like administering a little bit of sugar to make the medicine go down.

Coffee For Tired Blood?

People with "tired blood" may someday get a boost from drinking coffee that has been fortified with iron-if the zooming cost of the nation's favority beverage doesn't get them first.

Iron deficiency, particularly among women of childbearing age, is a public health problem, say researchers with the Agriculture Department's Human Nutrition Laboratory in Grand Forks, N.D. Iron-fortified coffee could be a solution, they told a scientific conference in Chicago the other day.

Although breads and cereals are generally fortified with iron, and have been for years, many women are reluctant to eat enough of these foods to satisfy their iron requirement. But they do drink coffee, whether it is good for them or not.

In their experiments, the researchers added 3.28 milligrams of an iron supplement, ferrous fumarate, to each gram of dry coffee grounds. Tests with our laboratory friends the rats indicated that four cups of similarly fortified coffee could provide an adult woman with about 70 per cent of her minimum daily requirement of iron.

None of the 20 employees of the laboratory who sampled the brew could tell any difference in taste, aroma or color between fortified coffee and unfortified coffee.

The cost of the ferrous furmarate used in the study was less than a penny for enough to fortify three pounds of ground coffee.

THE PERFECT A ASSIST

Some years ago when I was living in New York. I had a friend, named Andy, who was a push-over. I often unougnt people took advantage of him, but he didn't seem to care. One day while Andy was walking me home, a young woman approached us in great anxiety. She had a bandaid over her nose, cotton stuffed up each nostril, and was carrying two shopping bags overloaded with packages.

"Excuse me, please," she began. "I was on the subway coming from my doctor's and my purse was stolen. My bus ticket to New Jersey was in it. I've got some change but not enough for another ticket. I just need 86c. I hate to ask for help this way, but..." she faltered. "I'd pay you back if you'd give me your address."

I sighed. I could tell immediately that she was a hustler. She knew 86c was a lot of change for a person to find. She was probably hoping a dollar would be offered. I was right. Andy didn't have the change and was pulling a dollar out of his wallet. "I think I have some money," I said quickly. I saw her face fall as I changed Andy's dollar and he gave her the 86c. She thanked him, however, and insisted that he write down his address.

"You didn't believe all that?" I asked Andy after she left.

"Sure," he shrugged. anyway, if she really did need the money, that 86c will do more good in her pocket than it would in mine."

It was useless to argue with him, but a few weeks later I saw a chance to make my point. We were in the subway station when I spied her again, in the same condition as before. I nudged Andy. "It looks like she's getting ready for some more customers."

"Kind of looks that way," he answered but said nothing more. Five minutes later as we passed a blind beggar, he dropped a dollar bill in the man's cup. "The trouble with you, Barb," he said, "is you haven't any faith." Then he shoved something in my hand. It was a check from a New Jersey bank for 86c.

The Lesson Of Watergate

The judge: He was not the Chief Justice, not a congressional committee chairman, not even an American. The moral magistrate of Richard Nixon's guilt was, finally, a British journalist who, like the defendant, stood to gain great profit from the trial.

The defendant: That Richard Nixon had been unseen for three years was startling in itself. For many of us, our entire adult lives can be calibrated by his six (or was it 60) crises. How minutely, thus, we inspected the deepened seams on the mask of his face, and wondered whether he thought even a million dollars could compensate him for the self-degradation of each new (tell-tale?) fluff, fumble and evasion. Because of his hours, he has to bring me home no later than 11 o'clock at night. Arnold is interested in scouting. He has never had a traffic ticket for speeding. He loves to play golf and tennis. He would like you and Mom to visit his family at Newport this summer. They could send their private plane for you any time you would like to do it."

"Hello, my name is Patrick O'Brien and I'm a scout for the Notre Dame football team. I just saw your son out there throw a football. I was wondering if he would be willing to go to Notre Dame on a four-year athletic scholarship. I can't promise you that he'll play first string in his freshman year, but from what I've seen so far, I would be amazed if the coach would want to keep him on the bench."

"Dad, I know this may not be the time to talk about it, but I just wanted to reassure you that when you retire I have every intention of supporting you in your old age. I'm only starting out in business, but I've set aside a part of my salary for a trust fund for you and Mom. As I rise up the ladder of success, I will put more and more in it. I hope you will be able to live on the interest from the fund, but I've set it up so you can touch the principal any time you and Mom want to take a trip or buy something. It's just my small way of saying 'Thank you for everything you've done.' "

"Mr. Melton, this is Time magazine calling. We're doing a cover story on your daughter, Jeannette, who has been named 'Person of the Year,' and we were wondering if one of our reporters could come out and interview you for it?"

"Mr. Sanford, this is the White House calling. The President would like to know if it would be all right for your daughter, Nancy, to sleep in the tree house with Amy overnight?"

Washington Merry-Go-Round

WILL THE FBI BE THE SAME?

By JACK ANDERSON and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — The FBI, once the Rock of Gibraltar of government agencies, has been shaken down to its foundations. Several agents have been accused of violating the laws they were sworn to uphold. One veteran of the wars against crime and sedition, John Kearney, has been indicted and faces trial.

This has stirred a great debate in the backrooms of Washington. Most agents have lined up solidly behind Kearney; they believe he has been singled out by the Justice Dept. as a scapegoat. The people around Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell, on the other hand, warn that agents must live by the laws they enforce.

Both sides have brought us confidential papers. We have listened to their impassioned arguments. The outcome could determine whether the FBI will survive as a formidable law enforcement agency.

As the bootleggers and gangsters of the 1920s gave way to the drug traffickers and revolutionaries of the 1970s, the FBI stood unscathed. Its minions developed a reputation for vigilance and integrity. The greenest agent in the field became accepted in his community as a fearless, incorruptible bloodhoud.

But increasingly the FBI devoted an incredible portion of its manpower, its budget and its priorities to spying on citizens who merely exercised the constitutional guarantees of free speech, assembly and petition.

The Socialist Workers party, for example, preaches a peaceful but unpopular Marxist political philosophy. It does not advocate the violent overthrow of the existing system.

The party has every right under the Constitution, therefore, to operate in this country. Yet some FBI officials, in their zeal, began to look upon themselves as less subject to the laws they required others to obey.

They allegedly burglarized party offices and stole financial records, membership lists and other documents. The Socialist Workesrs have shown us evidence, for example, that the FBI broke into their headquarters in Detroit in October, 1971.

Some of the stolen records mysteriously turned up in the files of the Detroit police. One woman, named Norma Jean Lodico, resigned from the party, which kept the only copy of resignation letter. Yet a copy of the letter later turned up in the files of the Civil Service Commission.

She was called in for questioning, as an Interior Dept. employee, about her "subversive" activities. Other people, whose names appeared on the stolen records, also began getting visits and phone calls from FBI agents.

The indicted Keaney, however, headed a special FBI team, which was assigned to investigate the Weathermen Underground. Unlike the Socialist Workers, the Weathermen were violent. They had claimed credit for numerous bombings across the country. FBI sources told us the weathermen were the most dangerous of all political dissidents.

Now, Kearney has been charged with using illegal wiretaps and mail tamperings during his investigation of the Weathermen. His supporters showed us a memo about the case, which makes the following points:

– Former Atty. Gen. Edward Levi, in a decision not to prosecute federal agents for opening mail, said: "Questions of the legality of intelligence methods ... did not reach the courts until this decade ...Whatever can be said about the law now, the Department believes at the time the potential defendants acted, there was substantial evidence for thinking that the law was otherwise."

– Levi maintained that officials "at the highest levels" failed to clarify investigative guidelines. Therefore, "all this would render a prosecution by the government hypocritical."

– Not until 1972 did the courts rule that the president lacks the power to authorize unwarranted wiretappings unless it involves foreign espionage. "In this connection," the document notes, "all the activities alleged in the Kearney indictment precede (this) decision."

– Former CIA chief Richard Helms authorized a surreptitious entry into a Fairfax, Va., photographic studio in a "national security case." Ex-FBI boss L. Patrick Gray also ordered a break-in of the home of a suspect believed to be in league with Arab terrorists. In each case, the Justice Dept. declined to prosecute. Yet it has indicted Kearney, a lower-level official, on similar charges.

– The courts have also ruled that federal agents can't be held responsible for actions that they believed were proper and had the approval of superiors. This decision arose out of the trial of Bernard Barker and Eugenio Martinez, the Watergate burglars, who were also charged with the burglary of the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

– The prosecution of Kearney will hinder future intelligence operations. Agents, despite orders from superiors, will be afraid to carry out the orders. "Why," demands the document, "should future agents disregard the warning that anything they do, no matter how well intentioned ... will be put to the test of strict criminal liability at a later time."

The Kearney case, as it approaches a showdown, should produce some fireworks.

Instant Citizenship?

White House insiders say Carter will Amnesty millions of illegal aliens

WASHINGTON— There will be no dragnet-ing of illegal aliens or anything resembling mass deportations, though "undocumented workers" hold 3.8 million jobs in the United States according to confidential Immigration and Naturalization Service reports now somewhere in President Carter's Oval Office.

In effect, this will grant mass amnesty as pledged to the Mexican-American community by Vice President Walter Mondale during the presidential campaign. This definitive policy on the illegals will be proclaimed by Jimmy Carter "shortly" says a member of the cabinet-level task force on the undocumented ones. And it will mean that the six million who have flooded into the U.S. without benefit of official entry papers will have instant, quasi-legal status -- permanent right-to-residency in our country.

It's all more intricate than that. But that's the bottom line for the millions of illegal aliens already part of their communities and in hundreds of industries and many states other than those of citrus ranches and stoop-labor valleys.

Just how complex the illegal alien "problem" is, Mr. Carter learned during a victual mass meeting of some 30 cabinet members and consultants in the White House on May 24. There were those, such as task force "co-chairman" Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell, who said the illegals were illegal and should be punished for breaking the law.

There was Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, whose colleagues report he's actually for a massive amnesty. And there were the civil libertarians who are opposed to creating any sort of national identification system.

There is White House consideration of the issuance of a "work card." But the same genre who opposed the distribution of Social Security cards decades ago now fight the "work card" proposal.

The liberals are countered with the argument that the illegal alien "work card" would not be a national identification card (I.D.) as in the Soviet Union because no police authority of any kind would hae the power to demand its presentation for identification.

The card would have to be shown only to an employer – just as the "boss" now has the right to ask a new jobholder for his or her Social Security number.

When the President makes this policy public "shortly" he is expected to announce the beefing up of the frontier patrols, border guards and customs officers. But only the naive believe that the long Mexican and Canadian boundary lines and Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific coasts can be secured from inundation by "illegals."

There are more angles to this problem than in a warehouse full of slide rules. There is the crime syndicate for example in Southern California. There, the underworld opearates "protected manufacturing plants" which whip out hundreds of thousands of garments a year.

Almost half the needle workers in Los Angeles County garment machine shops are illegal Mexicans. Mostly women. The International Ladies Garment Workers' Union hasn't been able to organize more than 10 per cent of them. The labor turnover is too swift. The mob is too strong. Many of the shops are "gorilla" controlled and have direct links to the Northeast crime families and in Chicago.

The women are mistreated. The illegals' miserable pay is slashed by skimming for check cashing services, for non-existent union dues and insurance, according to the California Organized Crime and Criminal Intelligence Branch.

In New York City the illegals hold some 750,000 jobs– many of them in the construction field. There are even two open-air hiring halls in the Big Apple.

And some federal authorities say confidentially that many undocumented aliens work on projects paid for by the New York City Board of Education. One source charges that illegal aliens even help paint the Statue of Liberty. And there is an insistent demand for a full investigation.

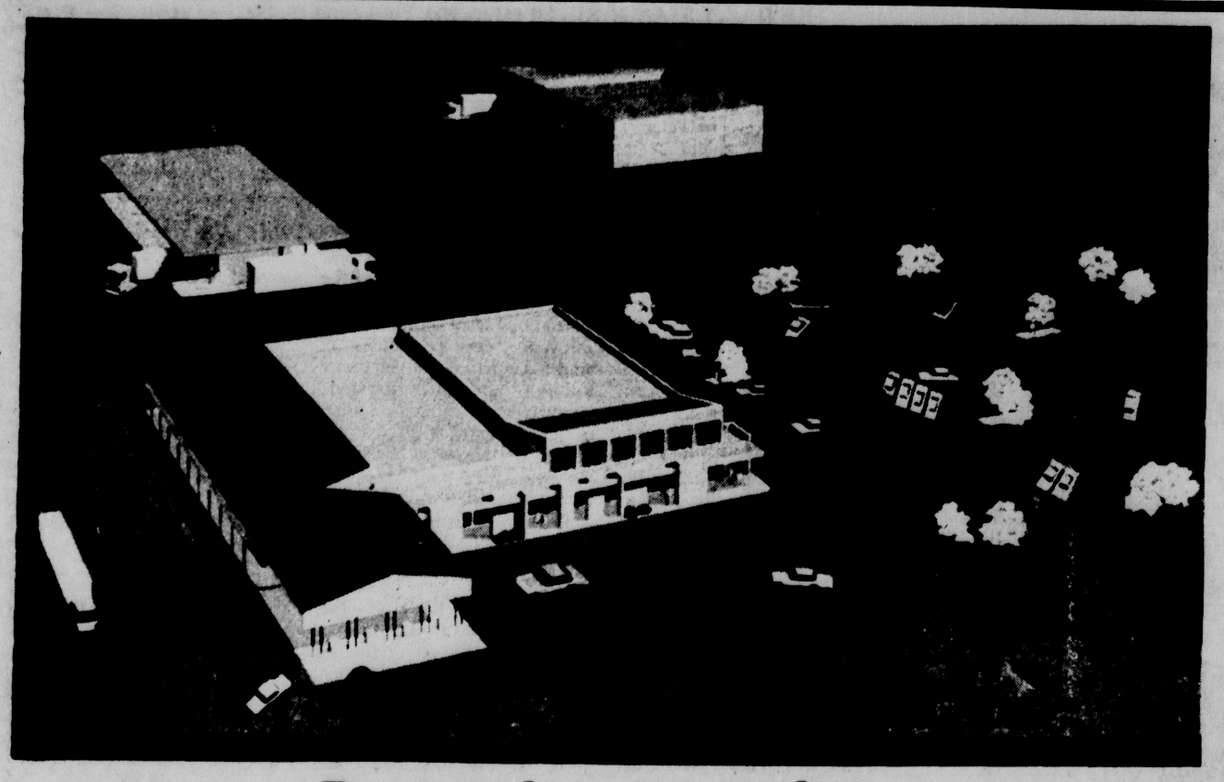
Out on famed Long Island (N.Y.), which parallels the New England coastline, there are some 500,000 illegal aliens in well paying jobs – as construction workers in boom areas, as domestics, as hospital employes -- the whole thing whirlpooled by surging suburbia.

No one in the White House has yet come up with an answer to the problem of cauterizing the ceaseless "invasion" of the United States. No one really actually knows how heavy is the toll in welfare, social security, Medicaid and Medicare and education. It does run into the scores of billions of dollars annuyally for the millions of non-employed illegals and their families.

Further, one task force adviser pointed out that any mass deportation of aliens to other lands, except Mexico, would make enough jobs available to citizens to cut the national unemployment figure to a "tolerable" 5 per cent.

But that won't happen. It will be the "work card" solution and in effect instant legal residence. Some will be sent home. But the rest will stay -- and pull in millions of new unlawful aliens from as far off as southern Italy (via Canada) and South America.

It does appear that documenting the illegals will e a growth industry.



Proposed new complex

This is an artists conception of the proposed new truckstop and restaurant complex to be built by Saveway Oil Company of Cape Girardeau near Charleston. The complex will be in operation by April 1 of next year, according to James Estes, president of Saveway Oil in Cape Girardeau.

Truckstop construction begins

CHARLESTON — The proposed construction of a seven acre truckstop and restaurant complex by the Saveway Oil Company of Cape Girardeau was confirmed last week, according to Warren E. Hearnes, legal consultant for the project.

The site for the complex which began construction last week is at the I-57 and Highway 60 east interchange. Hearnes said the plans for the project are still in their early stages with the lease just being obtained last week.

Hearnes said the proposed complex will consist of three major structures. The main building will contain two restaurants, two or more dining rooms which may be used for meeting quarters, a lounge, administrative offices and a western store and gift shop. In front of the main building will be fueling facilities for automobiles.

The second structure will be directly behind the restaurant area. It will consist of fueling stations for heavy diesel trucks. This would allow separate fueling for both passenger vehicles and tanden traffic.

The third part of the proposed complex will be the Truck Service Center. In this area heavy trucks may get mechanical work done.

Also included in the initial plans are parking facilities apart from the other areas. The complex will be located immediately across from the A. L. Story Sr. residence.

James Estes, president of the Saveway Oil Company of Cape Girardeau, stated that no interior plans have been finalized. Estes stated that about 75 persons would be employed by the facility.

"We are just in the initial stages of construction," Estes said. "All I can say is that the complex will be in operation by April 1, 1978."

'77 Legislature scores well

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — When the 1977 Missouri Legislature, running on a high mixture of freshman lawmakers, closed its doors today, the chambers were cleared of many bills cast aside in past sessions.

Legislative leaders surveying the vacant floors were quick to point to the high volume of bills passed—more than 200—and the importance of many of those.

"It's not a question of talking about quantity or quality," said House Speaker Pro Tem Bob Griffin, D-Cameron. "We can talk about both."

That mood of satisfaction permeating the waning hours of the legislative session which adjourned at midnight Wednesday, was tainted, however, by the legislature's failure to approve a $125 million capital improvements budget for the first time since 1969.

Lawmakers credited everything from the new crop of freshman to a new set of legislative rules with allowing the General Assembly to clear the tables of bills which had been hung up in late-session logjams or talked to death on the chamber floor in past years.

Public hearings scheduled on water rights legislation

JEFFERSON CITY— Public hearings will be conducted this summer by a Missouri House subcommittee to obtain citizen view in the drafting of water rights legislation.

The six-member subcommittee of the House Agriculture Committee, chaired by Rep. D.R.Osburn of Monroe City, will be headed by Rep. Ray Hamlett (D-Laddonia). Subcommittee members include: Rep. Vic Downing (D-Bragg City), Rep. Jim Russell (D-Savannah), Rep. Marvin Maloney (D-Napoleon), Rep. Vernon Betz (R-Tranton) and Rep. Vernon Bruckerhoff (R-St. Marys).

In addition to citizen input from the public hearings, assistance in drafting a water rights bill will come from the Missouri Farm Bureau, the Missouri Farmer's Association, National Farmer's Organization, the State Geologists, the Department of Natural Resources and the University of Missouri. The time and location for the public hearings, which will be attended by representatives of these groups,, will be announced at a later date.

Hamlett said Missouri is one of only a few states with inadequate statutory provisions to assure proper supply and equitable distribution of available water among agriculture and other competitive interests.

"The need for water rights legislation has been recognized by Missouri's farm organizations and the Department of Natural Resources," Hamlett said. "Citizen input from these public hearings will be an invaluable tool as the committee drafts water rights legislation."

Noting that the reality of dry weather in 1976 has intensified the interest in irrigation, lake and pond building and water reuse, Hamlett said, "Drinking water shortages and crop failures in many parts of the state is only a sample of what is to come unless sound water laws and programs are enacted."

Several important areas in which the sub-committee will concentrate on include: programs to insure adequate drinking water, irrigation groundwater depletion and salinity, and lakes and dams.

An estimated 282,000 acres of farm land were irrigated in Missouri in 1976, and agriculture experts say that figure could easily double or triple before the end of the decade. "Farmers are rapidly learning, especially in these dry years, that irrigation can mean the difference between a good crop year and a bad one," Hamlett said.

"This competition for the use of water with farms, small towns and urban areas could pose acute problems in areas where there is little groundwater or where the water supplies are mineralized."

Studies are alerady underway on the effects of irrigation in the farmlands of southeast Missouri and are just beginning in western and northern Missouri under the direction of the state geological survey in Rolla.

"Even though the state is blessed with abundant water resources," Hamlett said, "they are not always distributed where the need exists, nor or they always of uniform quality or quantity."

Up Up and Away

By Jill Corti

"Up, Up and away in my beautiful, my beautiful baloon" was a famous line in a musical hit in the early sixties by a rock group, the Fifth Dimension, but it could also describe the feelings of Carol Edwards, of New Madrid, the first woman flight instructor at Cape Girardeau Airways.

Mrs. Edwards, the mother of a two year old daughter, Lucy, began flying in the fall of 1973. "It was three weeks after my husband and I were married." My husband took me to the flight instructor and said "teach her to fly" Mrs. Edwards recalled.

She admits the only reason she learned to fly in the first place was just because he wanted her too. Mrs. Edwards husband, John, also has his pilots license and uses the family plane to view crops, enjoyment and trips.

Mrs. Edwards received her private licenses in May of 1974, shortly afterwards, she became pregnant with their daughter Lucy who says "I want to fly." It wasn't until last August when she participated in the last Powder Puff Derby did she return to the flying scene. It was then that she realized that she was wanting a career and she enjoyed flying so an aviation career it was.

All of her sudden encouragement to take on an aviation career she says, came from the time spent during the Powder Puff Derby with over 400 women pilots. It was there, she added that I gained confidence and enthusiasm.

From September 1976 to May of 1977 she spent commuting everyday from New Madrid to Cape Girardeau to obtain both her commercial license, instrument license and flight instructors license.

Her career began three weeks ago for her at Cape Girardeau Airways. Why Cape Airport? Simply because the New Madrid Airport is busy with agricultural work, and the Sikeston Airport has already one flight instructor and not enough work.

She has four students, three who come everyday and some twice a day. Three of the students are male and the other female. She is striving to get more women to get their licenses and knows what they will go through to get one. "There were times I cried when trying to learn these things and so I know I can help them" she added.

Flying to Mrs. Edwards is a great confidence builder for women and not necessarily for women's libers. She said that although the aviation field is still predominately male, the airplane doesn't know what sex the pilot is.

To become a licensed pilot, you need 35 hours of flying time, 35 hours of ground school which averages out to about a 2 to 4 month period of time. Most of her flying lessons average about one hour each.

Mrs. Edwards commutes whether by air or car six days a week, from New Madrid where her hours are 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. unless she has a student and she has been known to work as late as 8 p.m.

The main point Mrs. Edwards and her fellow instructors stress to their students is safety first. We turn out safe pilots and we don't let them loose till they are safe."

.Mrs. Edwards is a member of the 99's a fraternity type group of women pilots which was formed in 1929. The name 99 came about when in 1929 there were 106 licenses women pilots and only 99 joined. Presently there are over 5,000 members of the international organization. Although it is referred as a fraternity type organization it is not a social group because of the educational type programs they offer. The programs help familiarize the public on the importance of general aviation (small airplanes).

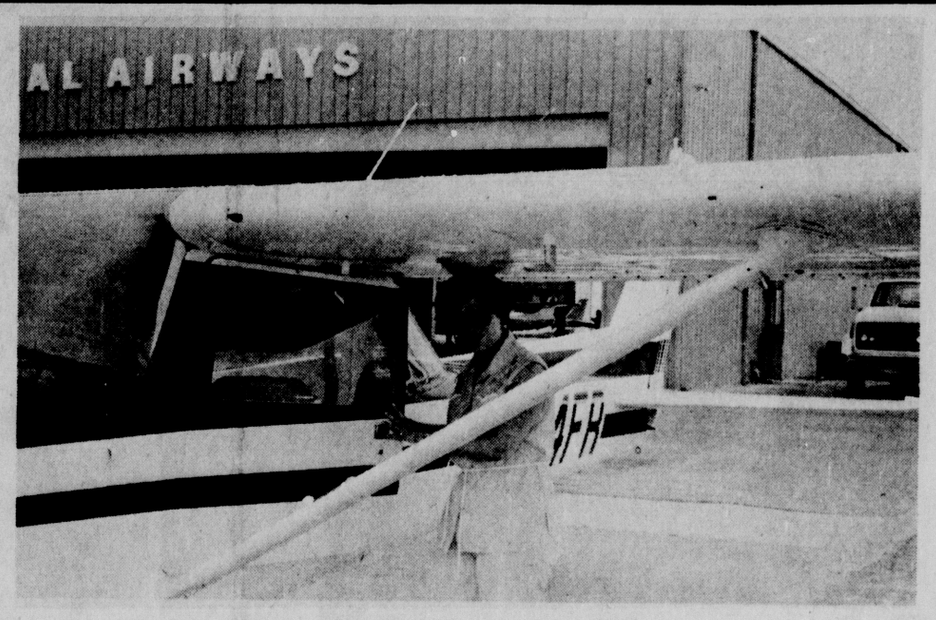
The 99's also try to help new pilots continue and try to encourage proficiency and safety in the pilot.

Mrs. Edwards flew in the last Powder Puff Derby with the present 99's president, Mrs. Lois Fringenbanum of Carbondale, Ill. She is rather disappointed in the fact that the Powder Puff is no longer. The Airways Classic is to replace the powder puff and if it is as strict as its predecessor, Mrs. Edwards says it will be good.

She doesn't plan on racing this year but will enter next year's races.

Mrs. Edwards says she enjoys watching the men she teaches simply to keep their ego up because she is a woman and they have to do better than her.

Her first student to do a solo was Daryl Hendrix a student from Cape Girardeau. He soloed on June 10 which was a day both he and Mrs. Edwards will never forget.



Preparing for class

Carol Edwards of New Madrid, prepares to board the plane which is used in instructing students. Mrs. Edwards is the first woman flight instructor at the Cape Central Airways at Cape Girardeau. Mrs. Edwards first learn to fly three weeks after she was married and had participated in the Powder Puff Derby.

Learning the gauges

The first step in flying is understanding all the gauges, such as the artificial horizon which Mrs. Edwards points to. Mrs. Edward has four students presently and is seeking more. The first woman flight instructor says that flying builds confidence in you especially for women.

By Jill Corti

"Up, Up and away in my beautiful, my beautiful baloon" was a famous line in a musical hit in the early sixties by a rock group, the Fifth Dimension, but it could also describe the feelings of Carol Edwards, of New Madrid, the first woman flight instructor at Cape Girardeau Airways.

Mrs. Edwards, the mother of a two year old daughter, Lucy, began flying in the fall of 1973. "It was three weeks after my husband and I were married." My husband took me to the flight instructor and said "teach her to fly" Mrs. Edwards recalled.

She admits the only reason she learned to fly in the first place was just because he wanted her too. Mrs. Edwards husband, John, also has his pilots license and uses the family plane to view crops, enjoyment and trips.

Mrs. Edwards received her private licenses in May of 1974, shortly afterwards, she became pregnant with their daughter Lucy who says "I want to fly." It wasn't until last August when she participated in the last Powder Puff Derby did she return to the flying scene. It was then that she realized that she was wanting a career and she enjoyed flying so an aviation career it was.

All of her sudden encouragement to take on an aviation career she says, came from the time spent during the Powder Puff Derby with over 400 women pilots. It was there, she added that I gained confidence and enthusiasm.

From September 1976 to May of 1977 she spent commuting everyday from New Madrid to Cape Girardeau to obtain both her commercial license, instrument license and flight instructors license.

Her career began three weeks ago for her at Cape Girardeau Airways. Why Cape Airport? Simply because the New Madrid Airport is busy with agricultural work, and the Sikeston Airport has already one flight instructor and not enough work.

She has four students, three who come everyday and some twice a day. Three of the students are male and the other female. She is striving to get more women to get their licenses and knows what they will go through to get one. "There were times I cried when trying to learn these things and so I know I can help them" she added.

Flying to Mrs. Edwards is a great confidence builder for women and not necessarily for women's libers. She said that although the aviation field is still predominately male, the airplane doesn't know what sex the pilot is.

To become a licensed pilot, you need 35 hours of flying time, 35 hours of ground school which averages out to about a 2 to 4 month period of time. Most of her flying lessons average about one hour each.

Mrs. Edwards commutes whether by air or car six days a week, from New Madrid where her hours are 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. unless she has a student and she has been known to work as late as 8 p.m.

The main point Mrs. Edwards and her fellow instructors stress to their students is safety first. We turn out safe pilots and we don't let them loose till they are safe."

Mrs. Edwards is a member of the 99's a fraternity type group of women pilots which was formed in 1929. The name 99 came about when in 1929 there were 106 licenses women pilots and only 99 joined. Presently there are over 5,000 members of the international organization. Although it is referred as a fraternity type organization it is not a social group because of the educational type programs they offer. The programs help familiarize the public on the importance of general aviation (small airplanes).

The 99's also try to help new pilots continue and try to encourage proficiency and safety in the pilot.

Mrs. Edwards flew in the last Powder Puff Derby with the present 99's president, Mrs. Lois Fringenbanum of Carbondale, Ill. She is rather disappointed in the fact that the Powder Puff is no longer. The Airways Classic is to replace the powder puff and if it is as strict as its predecessor, Mrs. Edwards says it will be good.

She doesn't plan on racing this year but will enter next year's races.

Mrs. Edwards says she enjoys watching the men she teaches simply to keep their ego up because she is a woman and they have to do better than her.

Her first student to do a solo was Daryl Hendrix a student from Cape Girardeau. He soloed on June 10 which was a day both he and Mrs. Edwards will never forget.

Preparing for class

Carol Edwards of New Madrid, prepares to board the plane which is used in instructing students. Mrs. Edwards is the first woman flight instructor at the Cape Central Airways at Cape Girardeau. Mrs. Edwards first learn to fly three weeks after she was married and had participated in the Powder Puff Derby.

Learning the gauges

The first step in flying is understanding all the gauges, such as the artificial horizon which Mrs. Edwards points to. Mrs. Edward has four students presently and is seeking more. The first woman flight instructor says that flying builds confidence in you especially for women.

Supernatural growth

The scientific name of mistletoe, "Phoradendron flavescens," is from the Greek and the first phrase literally means "tree thief." Growing on the tree, mistletoe makes its own sugar and starch from its own chlorophyll, but draws on its host for water and certain minerals. Mistletoe seeds are carried from tree to tree by birds. In ancient times, the Druids saw something supernatural in a plant growing and flourishing without roots in the earth.

Mr. and Mrs. David Richards

MATTHEWS — In services held recently, Angela Cude and David Richards were married at the First Christian Church. The Rev. Juaken Dumas of Cahokia, Ill. officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willard E. Cude of Matthews. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Richards of Matthews Route One.

The bride chose a dacron polyester organza gown of white. The bodice was accented by a V-neck line both in front and back, with a triple cap sleeves trimmed in Venice lace. The crescent waistline and skirt was highlighted with Venice lace. The founce ruffle in front swept to a brush train.

For her headpiece the bride chose a chapel length veil edged in lace was held by a matching lace cap.

The bride carried a bouquet of pink roses, carnations with whites baby's breath.

Suzanna Harrison of Whitehouse, Texas served as the maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Pam Dumas of Cahokia and Carla Warren of New Madrid.

Best man was Ken Lape of Matthews. Mark and Gary Silverthron served as Groomsmen.

Becky Lasters of Canalou served as Flower girl and Timmy Richardson served as ringbearer.

Bradley Cude and Michael Richards brothers of the bride and groom served as both candlelighters and ushers.

A reception for the couple and their guests followed at the church.

The bride is a 1976 graduate of Matthews High School and is presently attending Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau.

The groom is a 1976 graduate of Matthews High School and is employed by Richards Brothers Inc.

Mr. and Mrs. Richards live at Matthews Route One.

Carol Ann Miller

ST. LOUIS — Carol Ann Miller and George Thacher Guernsey IV were married recently at St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal Church. Sen. John C. Danforth performed the double ring ceremony with the assistance of the groom's brother John Guernsey who is a second year seminarian at Episcopal Divinity School at Boston, Mass.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Beatty P. Miller, 706 Courtney Drive, Sikeston. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Guernsey III of St. Louis. The couple has elected to retain their own names.

The bride chose a gown of jon mint overlaid with ivory and lace. A mantilla veil edged in Alencon lace extended over the gown's chapel train.

Mrs. Thomas Williams of Carthage served as matron of honor. Bridesmaids included Sandi Astolfi of Cincinnati, Ohio, Rachael Bode and Cathy Hofgren both of Washington, D. C. Janet Hamilton of Los Angeles, Calif. and Mrs. Rich Masterson of Berkley, Calif.

John Hunter of Vancouver, British Columbia Canada served as the best man. Groomsmen included Nathan Hecht of Dallas, John Luth of New York, Richard Sterling of Columbia, Mark Lee of Miami, Fla., and Robert James of St. Louis.

A reception for the couple and their guests followed at the St. Louis Club.

The bride is a 1965 graduate of Sikeston High School and a graduate of Christian College and the University of Missouri School of Journalism at Columia.

The groom is a graduate of Yale University and Wharton School of Business at the University of Pennsylvania.

The couple will be residing in New York where the groom is employed for a general management consulting firm.

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis LeRoy Brown

CAPE GIRARDEAU — An evening wedding was the setting at the Bethel Assembly of God Church for the marriage of Carol Ruth Mills and Dennis LeRoy Brown. The Rev. J. S. Watson performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Perry of Canalou. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Okla Brown of Detroit Lakes, Minn.

The bride chose a gown in candlelight silk organza and Alencon lace beaded, scalloped Alencon lace created the capelet collar that came to a Vaethe front waistline and dropped to a V at the back waist, with traditional bridal button closing from neck to end of collar.

Beaded lace also created the high neckline over the English net yoke. The long fitted sleeves ended with deep cuffs of beaded lace. A wide band of scalloped lace circled the hemline of the softly flared skirt with chapel train attached.

The bride chose an elegant picture hat lavishly trimmed with Alencon lace. Alencon appliques edged the entire brim and crown. Lace motifs also trimmed the inside brim. Candlelight satin ribbon bows and streamers were attached to the tiered elbow length veil of English illusion.

The bride carried a cascade of pink roses, mini carnations, orchid static, baby breath and ribbons.

Mrs. Allen Henderson of Springfield served as her sister's matron of honor. Bridesmaid was Roberta Brown of Bismark, N.D. sister of the groom.

Vernon Finck of Salt Lake City, Utah served as best man. Allen Henderson of Springfield was groomsmen.

Jerry Bell and Mike Givens both of Cape Girardeau were ushers.

The bride is a student at Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau majoring in elementary education.

The groom is a graduate of North Dakota State University and the Air Force Institute of Technology in Ohio. He is employed at the Proctor and Gamble Paper Products Company of Cape Girardeau.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown are living at 1512 N. Clark, Cape Girardeau.

Dear Ann Landers

The case of lonesome parents

Dear Ann Landers: I have never written to you before but after I read the letter signed "Lonesome" I knew my time had come.

My in-laws are also "Lonesome" – or at least that's what they tell everybody. We hear from many people that they complain constantly about how we ignore them and how hurt they are. It burns me up.

Last Sunday my husband and I and the kids went to see them and it was the same old story. Grandma and Grandpa talked about nothing but how sick they are, how much they suffer (she with backaches and he with rheumatism in his legs). It is a real contest to see who is in worse shape.

Then they tell us for the 50th time about how bad their operations were. (Hers two years ago for a tumor, his five years ago for a hernia.)

They are so self-centered it is awful. Never a question about the children or my husband's job or my interests. All they want to do is talk about themselves and their sicknesses.

Also, whenever we go to see them they greet us with, "We didn't think you were coming."

I wonder how many other "Lonesome" parents ther are around? If so, maybe there's a good reason their children don't visit them more often. -- Cause And Effect

Dear Cause: There are plenty around, and I heard from dozens of them. Your signature was most appropriate. Whenever you get an "effect" like the one described in your letter there's got to be a "cause." Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann: How can one put a stop to a friend's habit of asking strangers personal questions?

For example: Asking a waiter where he bought his shirt and telling him it is SO attractive it surely must be imported. (The waiter squirms and says, "Lady, it's from Ward's.")

Asking a local tailor what country produced his "interesting" accent. The embarrassed man apologizes because his English is poor.

Asking a bus deiver if he is Jamaican and having him reply: "Why is it important to know where I come from?"

Asking a librarian if she had ever been an actress because she speaks so professionally. (The woman explains that she had speech therapy to overcome a stroke.)

Every time my friend does this number on strangers I cringe, and she does it everywhere. -- L.M. From Kansas City

Dear L.M.: Your friend, I suspect, asks "none-of-your-business" type questions becaue she wants to show strangers that she is interested in them. While it may seem gauche to you, I don't think she comes off quite so crass to others.

Some people act embarrassed because they don't know how to handle a compliment. Minus the Jamaican bus driver, the rest of the questions wer actually praise in disguise. Your friend sounds like a jewel with some rough edges.

CONFIDENTIAL to Back to God Maybe?: Maybe. According to a recent Gallup Poll, U.S. church and synagogue attendance was up in 1976 for the first time in 18 years.

Is alcoholism ruining your life? Know the danger signals and what to do. Read the booklet, "Alcoholism -- Hope and Help," by Ann Landers. Enclose 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eating daffodils may be hazardous to your health. These and many popular flowers, ornamental shrubs and colorful weeds are poisonous, says National Geographic.

Young children are particularly vulnerable, but even adults often become unthinking nibblers of poisonous plants. "For many it's just sort of an automatic thing to do," said one naturalist. "You snap off a blade of grass or whatever and absent-mindedly stick it in your mouth."

Commonplace plants like wisteria, Carolina jasmine, azaleas, rhododendron and even honeysuckle have poisonous parts. The bright berries of privet hedges, pokeweed, ornamental yew trees, mistletoe and night shade can be dangerous if not deadly.

Open Mind

Seeks objective viewpoint

Dear Open Mind:

I need an objective viewpoint to determine whether I have valid objections concerning my psychiatrist

1. Is it usual practice for a psychiatrist to be consistently late? Ten to twenty minutes is commonplace.

2. Is it ethical to receive phone calls while giving therapy? One call a session is the average, but it has ranged up to five.

3. Does he have an obligation to return phone calls? Recently I called repeatedly over a 4-day period. He said he tried me once, but evidently did not try again.

4. Does he have the right to cut my session short? This has happened 5 or 6 times supposedly because of emergencies, . . . but

MIDNIGHT PHILOSOPHER

No meaningful relationship

Dear Midnight Philosopher:

From the questions you raise in your letter it appears as though you have disagreements with your therapist. These disagreements come after your three-year treatment by this psychiatrist with whom you doubtelessly have established a meaningful relationship. Since this be the case, it would be imperative that you consult with your psychiatrist and express openly and freely your dissatisfaction with the matters you identify in your letter. The likelihood is very great that as a result of such free discussion, the difficulties under consideration can be satisfactorily resolved.

It is suggested that if you do not receive satisfaction from such discussion with your psychiatrist, you ask to be referred to another psychiatrist to be seen in consultation and thereby to obtain a second opinion. If, after taking these steps, your dissatisfaction persists, you may wish to employ the grievance procedure established by the St. Louis Medical Society. The Grievance Committee will consider a written complaint against any St. Louis Medical Society member named in the letter.

H. Waldo Bird, M.D.,
Chairman The Mental Health Committee of the St. Louis Medical Society 8003 Forsyth Clayton, Mo. 63105

Dear Midtnight Philosopher:

From a therapeutic standpoint, the practices of your psychiatrist which you cite do violate almost all tenents of therapeutic communication. In order to be effective, a professional helper must create a climate of trust and confidence. He must maintain a focus on you and your problems. Most professionals keep the "therapeutic hour" sacred and free from all distractions, and interruptions. I can assure you that late appointments, constant interruptions, and frequent early closing of therapy sessions are NOT regular or recommended practies, and they do violate the commonly recognized practies of good therapeutic communication.

Remember, all psychiatrists, doctors, and other professions are in the business of public service. Their job is to serve you and your needs. As a paying consumer you hold the ultimate weapon – not a law suit, but withdrawal of your patronage. If your psychiatrist is doing these things to you, he is probably doing them to others. If you and other dissatisfied clients would terminate your relationship and seek service elsewhere, such practices would probably become more rare than they presently are.

No one psychiatrist has all the answers or is the ONLY source of help. If you are dissatisfied with this man's methods, you have the perfect right to "shop around" until you find someone with whom you do feel comfortable and in whom you have confidence.

Ask the Pastor

By Rev. E. Pembleton

Dear Pastor Pembleton: I am engaged to be married in December. My fiance' wants me to tell him all the wrong things I have done in my life. Should my secret sins be confessed to him? Or, should I confess them to the church? - Beth.

Dear Beth: You have asked one of the most important questions that anyone could ever ask. Usually, nothing is gained by INJURY, SUSPICION, and DISTRUST when the secret sins of our past are revealed to man. You should never reveal your secret sins to him! The church does not require confession of our secret sins. Confess your sins to God ALONE, and secure His forgiveness -- this is what counts. (See I John 1:9.)

If the sin is also against some person, then confession should be made to that person as well as to God. The extent of the confession should be made by the extent of the damage done by our evil deeds.

Dear Pastor Pembleton: I find difficulty in looking forward with anticipation to the second coming of Christ. The only attitude I have is one of fear, hoping He won't come in my day. How can I get rid of this feeling? – Pete.

Dear Pete: We can see many signs in the world about us indicating that Jesus is coming soon, but it is also true that "of that day and hour knoweth no man." For this reason Jesus said "Be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh." Matthew 24:44.

The Bible speaks approvingly of those who "love His appearing." If you truly love Jesus and have given your heart to Him, why should you be fearful of meeting a friend who is better than any other friend you can have in this world? Just as you look forward to meeting a friend whose company you have learned to appreciate, you should look forward eagerly to meeting the One who loved you so much that He died on Calvary's cross to save you. Of course, those who harbor sin in their lives will have only "a fearful looking for of judgment" in the second coming.

Find out for yourself why you "fear" and then ask God to help you make any changes in your life that may be necessary. As you make a complete surrender of your own plans and purposes to God, His peace will be yours and you, too, will look forward to His appearing with joy.

Send your questions to Pastor Pembleton, P.O. Box 65, Sikeston, Mo. 63801.

Preach to me preacher

By The Rev. Arthur C. Fulbright

"Preach the word. . . ."
II Timothy 4:2 (R.S.V.)

Early in my pastoral ministry, a young ministerial student asked me to explain the importance of biblical preaching. I gave the following answers: The Bible must continue to be our primary educational source. What is needed is sermons on basic Christian beliefs, with emphasis on the love of God, coherently stated. Congretations find it refreshing to hear a "preacher" stand up and tell what he believes and why, rather than expounding his-her doubts.

I went on to explain to the young minister that the most urgent need in the church today is a surer grasp of Christ's power to strengthen us through the blessed Holy Spirit. This is the challenge coming to me from my congregation: To preach the "word of God" in such a way that God the Holy Spirit may speak through me, and send the congregation back into the world to be the people of God!

What's the law?

The case of the unaffordable fee

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Mary Lou was a very bright high school girl with considerable charm and above-average popularity. In fact, she had everything going for her except for one thing: Her father was poor.

Consequently, when it came time for Mary Lou to graduate from high school, she couldn't afford to pay the fees for the graduation exercises, for a cap and gown, for the school yearbook or for the class ribbon. And while Mary Lou felt dejected, her father felt even more so, and he voiced his complaint in court.

"Under the U.S. Constitution," he pointed out, "everybody's supposed to be treated the same, but my daughter is being discriminated against. Because I don't have the money, she has been denied the pleasure of participating in her graduation exercises. If that's not discrimination in favor of the rich and against the poor, I'm John D. Rockefeller."

"Since fees are the same for all students," responded a school official, "there's obviously no discrimination. Nobody's treated more equally than anyone else."

Mary Lou's father was determined, however, and he insisted that the school authorities be stopped from collecting graduation fees from those students who were unable to pay them.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, wuld you hold for Mary Lou and her father?

This is how the judge ruled: NO. The judge held that the Equal Protection Clause of the U. S. Constitution does not bar reasonable classifications. And, said the judge, requiring the rich and poor to pay the same fees for graduation activities is not unreasonable on its face since the state is not required to equalize economic conditions. The right to a class ribbon or to the school yearbook, concluded the judge, is not one of our most fundamental rights to be protected.

(Based upon a 1973 U.S. District Court Decision)

If wild turkey did not immediately become the superstar of Thanksgiving, part of the reason may have been some Pilgrims' vague suspicion that eating the bird would cause leprosy.

CULTURAL HISTORY

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Portrait Gallery of the Smithsonian Institution is currently presenting an exhibition of documents and photographs covering more than a century of American cultural history.

"Artists and Writers" illustrates the close personal relationships that existed between such painters, sculptors and authors as artist Jerome Blum, and author Sherwood Anderson, of 19th-century sculptor Hiram Powers and his friend, the poet William Cullen Bryant. The exhibit will remain on view through December.

"3 Girls 3" shop in store where only one garment available

Carl Reiner, as a bank customer who gets robbed by the tellers, and Tony Curtis, as an unapproved TV headliner, guest-star in the third edition of "3 Girls 3" Wednesday, June 22 (8-9 p.m. DST) on NBC-TV.

Debbie Allen, Mimi Kennedy and Ellen Foley star in the critically acclaimed series.

In comedy sketches, Mimi and Debbie go shopping in a clothing store where salesman Reiner has only one garment. In a backstage scene, Ellen tells a new boyfriend that she plays all three girls on the show.

In the singles sketch, "bachelorettes" Ellen and Mimi go to a ski lodge to meet men and the men have one thing on their minds--skiing--except for Carl Reiner, who has a lot of talk for Mimi. Mimi, posing as "Wonderful Woman" for the cover of a TV magazine, complains about her life.

Musical selections include Ellen singing "This One's For You" and Debbie performing in a song and dance number, "Release Yourself."

Another backstage scene has Mimi informing Tony Curtis that he will not be a swash-buckler on the show as she promised, that he will not even be on the show.

"3 Girls 3" is produced by Kenny Solms and Gail Parent who also serve as writing supervisors. Gary Smith and Dwight Hemion are executive producers. Tim Kiley is director.

"The Stoolie" Roger Pittman, a small-time police informer, absconds with an advance from police Detective Alex Brogan that was earmarked for a narcotics set-up. Roger flees to Miami where Brogan finds him and bullies Roger and his girl Sheila into helping him recover the $7,500 advance.

Hundreds in S. E. Missouri Have!

Noel Botsch co-owner of Overturfs Pharmacy in Dexter and Natur Slim Rep. Richard Jackman discuss the merits of the Natur Slim weight program.

Wanema Townsley, manager of Cason's Pennyrich Boutique, 363 Main St., Batesville, has reported remarkable success with a high protein food, NaturSlim, which is sold by the boutique.

Mrs. Townsley, a user of NaturSlim, reported loss of 35 pounds in three months and that she has not regained the weight. She has introduced NaturSlim to hundreds of persons in the Batesville area who have reported loss of from a few pounds to 70 pounds.

Key to the NaturSlim program, Mrs. Townsley says, is use of the product, which makes a variety of Milkshakes for breakfast and lunch. This, she says, provides two high protein meals and the user is free to eat anything desired for dinner.

The weight loss program requires no exercises, no drugs or shots and best of all, brings on no hunger pangs. Mrs. Townsley, who claims to be the best ad for NaturSlim, emphasizes the general well-being, improved attitude, looks and health which result from weight loss. She also adds that NaturSlim is not an expensive product.

JOIN OUR LOSERS!

Hundreds in S. E. Missouri Have!

Noel Botsch co-owner of Overturfs Pharmacy in Dexter and Natur Slim Rep. Richard Jackman discuss the merits of the Natur Slim weight program.

Wanema Townsley, manager of Cason's Pennyrich Boutique, 363 Main St., Batesville, has reported remarkable success with a high protein food, NaturSlim, which is sold by the boutique.

Mrs. Townsley, a user of NaturSlim, reported loss of 35 pounds in three months and that she has not regained the weight. She has introduced NaturSlim to hundreds of persons in the Batesville area who have reported loss of from a few pounds to 70 pounds.

Key to the NaturSlim program, Mrs. Townsley says, is use of the product, which makes a variety of Milkshakes for breakfast and lunch. This, she says, provides two high protein meals and the user is free to eat anything desired for dinner.

The weight loss program requires no exercises, no drugs or shots and best of all, brings on no hunger pangs. Mrs. Townsley, who claims to be the best ad for NaturSlim, emphasizes the general well-being, improved attitude, looks and health which result from weight loss. She also adds that NaturSlim is not an expensive product.

Foghat Garners Heavy-Metal Gold

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures

"We've been so lucky," says lead guitarist Rod Price of Foghat, as the group's latest album, "Night Shift," goes gold, "that it's almost boring."

There were a few rough patches in the road when the heavy metal, good-time music quartet started, but Price and drummer Roger Earl don't want to stress them, even to liven up a possibly boring account of their rise to success. "I don't want to talk about negative garbage," Earl says. "Let's talk about all the good stuff that makes us wake up with grins on our faces and bells ringing in our ears."

Foghat got started in 1971 when Earl and lead vocalist and guitarist Dave Peverett left Savoy Brown in England and decided to form a new group. Price knew them from playing on the relatively small English "clubs in pubs" circuit, auditioned and was taken on. Present bassist Craig MacGregor is the only American, replacing Nick Jameson who replaced the original Tony Stevens.

They took their Savoy Brown earnings, made an album, and got an American manager, Tony Outeda. He sold the album to Bearsville, an American record company they're still with.

Then they went on a two-week English tour with Captain Beefheart — this is a rough patch in the road — and bombed. Earl says, "We hadn't played on stage in one-and-a-half years. We'd immersed ourselves in a country atmosphere of rehearsing and recording, to get a great album. We'd sort of lost touch with playing live; that takes a lot of playing and a lot of sweat."

One single, "Slow Ride," got into the top 10 best-sellers. It's a rarity for a hard-rock single to hit the top 10.

BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: GUNTHER IS DISAPPOINTED THAT HIS WOUNDS ARE HEALING SO RAPIDLY, FOR IT HAS BEEN NICE TO SIT ON THE SHADY PIAZZA WITH ZARA.

HE EVEN FEELS A PANG OF JEALOUSY WHEN SHE CANTERS OFF WITH MAFAUD TO INSPECT MEADOWS AND PASTURES.

IF HE EVER INTENDS TO MAKE ZARA HIS WIFE, HE MUST FORBID HER RIDING HALF-WILD HORSES AND STAYING OUT UNTIL DARK WITH OTHER MEN.

HE VISIONS HER IN HIS HOME IN GAUL BEFORE A WARM FIRE, COMFORTABLE, IF SOMEWHAT CROWDED, IN HIS GREAT HALL.

GUNTHER SMILES AS HE THINKS OF HOW ZARA WILL LOVE THE WINTER SPORTS. BUT HE MUST HAVE A TALK WITH HIS COMPANIONS.....THERE MUST BE LESS DRUNKENNESS AT THE HUNT BANQUET. THE CLATTER OF HOOFS ENDS HIS DREAMING.

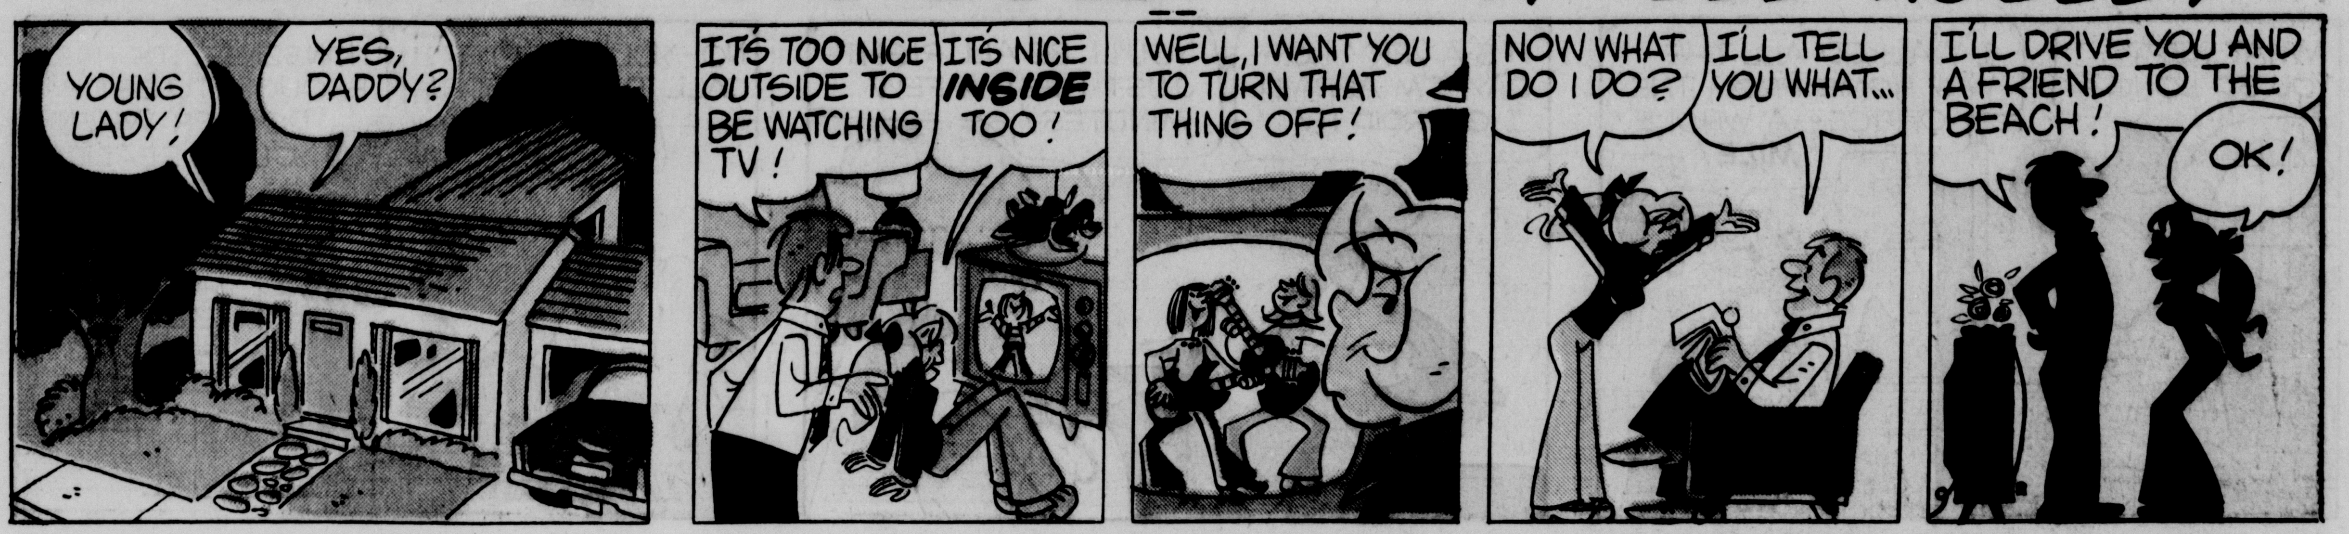
PONYTAIL ◇◇ BY LEE HOLLEY



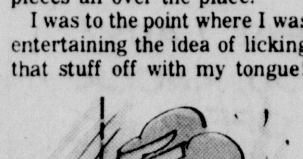
DEAR FOLKS:

Do you go mad trying to clean your walls? My apartment walls are that white, bumpy kinda stuff that is really a pain to clean.

It's not the product I use to clean, but how to put it on and wipe it off.

Paper towels shred, old bath towels do the same, a sponge comes apart and leaves bits and pieces all over the place.

I was to the point where I was entertaining the idea of licking that stuff off with my tongue!



Being an avid pantyhose saver, I had just tossed a pair into my oldies, but goodies, bag.

Hmmmm. I cut off the legs and used the panty portion.

A miracle!

It worked beautifully.

My tongue was saved and my walls were clean!

The hose don't leave little flecks on the walls. They are easy to rinse out — it snags a little, but big deal! You're not going to wear them again. I tell you, it worked better than anything I have tried before.

The best part is just plunk it in the trash when done.

God bless those pantyhose. I don't know what I would do without them, I mean besides wearing them.

Heloise II

P.S. I think old pantyhose with runs are like mayonnaise jars... they may be finished as far as their intended use, but man, oh, man, they can be recycled and recycled and recycled.

HINTS FROM HIM

DEAR HELOISE:

Popcorn lovers who like the "feel" of the theater popcorn box, and dislike the wash-up needed with bowls used at home, may be interested in using washed milk cartons.

A half-gallon carton is big enough for most men to get their hands into. A gallon carton makes a good family popcorn bowl.

Tops can be left on, or removed from the cartons as the user prefers.

John Wallis White

LABEL THIS GREAT!

DEAR HELOISE:

I carry address labels in my purse. Whenever a store has a contest, raffle, etc., I apply a label with my name and address to the entry blank and save myself a lot of time.

These labels are especially handy when at a fair where there are many booths that have drawings.

Lee Budilovsky

HAIR'S HOW!

DEAR HELOISE:

I have a lot of animals at my home and I looked at my pants one day at school and they had black cat hair on them. All I could think of to use was my large eraser.

I rubbed it across my pants leg and it rolled the hair into a ball I could easily remove.

I don't know if it would work on all pants, but it worked for me.

Sandy Glunz

MACRAME TRICK

DEAR HELOISE:

Macrame, I find, is a real joy for me.

I have made two shoulder bags and discovered, out of necessity, that by slipping it over a canvas wig block and then using the T-pins to anchor, that the knots may be tied with ease. This would be helpful on any circular item being made.

If one does not have a canvas wig block, a foam one would do, and not as expensive to buy.

Glenna Cantlin

LETTER OF LOVE

DEAR HELOISE:

My neighbor and I feel we cannot afford to buy more than one newspaper, so she takes one city paper and I take the other and we exchange them.

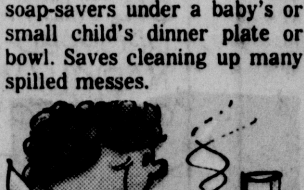
SPILL SAVER

DEAR HELOISE:

Use one of those suction cup soap-savers under a baby's or small child's dinner plate or bowl. Saves cleaning up many spilled messes.



Soap-savers can be carried in your purse for use in restaurants or at a friend's home.

RICE IS NICE

DEAR HELOISE:

I was experimenting with rice a few weeks ago and discovered I could substitute cooked rice for potatoes in "potato" salad.

Since then, I have made it many times using the same ingredients I use when making potato salad. However, I do mold it and chill it. It's delicious!

Christina Smith

STRING ALONG

DEAR HELOISE:

Do you become disturbed when the ties of your apron get all wound up with other clothes in your washing machine? There is a remedy.

Safety pin the ends of the ties to the center of the neckpiece of the apron.

Heloise Fan

HOT ICE CREAM!

DEAR HELOISE:

I am 11 years old. My mother thought of a way to make rich, creamy hot chocolate to drink in a hurry.

You put a scoop of ice cream (we use vanilla) in the hot chocolate and stir.

JUST FOR TOYS

DEAR HELOISE:

Recently, I bought my 10-year-old daughter a new metal lunch box and gave the old one to my 3-year-old. She was absolutely delighted.

She uses it to carry all her tiny toys from room to room as it has a handy handle. This encourages her to pick the toys up and put them away in her little pail so they are out from underfoot. (You know how those little toys can be a pain.)

I thought her idea was pretty clever for a 3-year-old. She sure solved a problem for me.

● Letter Perfect? What letter is a bird? J. What letter is a vegetable? P. What letter asks a question. Y. Can you think of some?

FOUR salesmen, John, Henry, Joe and Bill, each leaves his home to catch the 6 p.m. flight to Oshkosh. Each can just make it if his watch is right, but, alas, all four timepieces are wrong.

Bill's watch is 10 minutes fast, but he thinks it's 5 minutes slow.

John's watch is 10 minutes slow, but he thinks it's 10 minutes fast.

Joe's is 5 minutes slow, but he thinks it's 10 minutes fast.

Hank's is 5 minutes fast, but he thinks it's 10 minutes slow.

Question: Who does and who doesn't make the plane?

Bill and Hank make it; John and Joe miss it.
